He has not always put it in that order.

Mr. Carter's administration wants the allies' help in one last round of what the President calls "aggressive" diplomacy. Perhaps the matter will be taken back to the United Nations; certainly, as Mr Carter made clear, he wants the allies to honour the economic sanctions against Iran they all voted for in the last abortive United Nations Security Council resolution, and to down-grade their diplomatic sepre-sentation in Tebran. By standing up and being counted together the President's hope is that the Iranians and the Soviet Union may be made to back down.

All this could take some time. Mr Carter's dual purpose lest night seemed to be to make clear to his own impatient people that "we do not have much time left" to see if allied solidarity would work, while also saying "we do intend to exhaust not only diplomatic and economic action . . but also to exhaust the common effort of concerted action on the part of the allies . . .".

Lausanne, April 13.—The Olympic movement's Executive is to hold a special meeting next week after the United States Olympic Committee's decision to endorse President Carter's boycon of the Moscow games.

Lord Killanin, President of the International Olympic Committee, said the meeting—to start here on April 21—was the result of requests by the Mos-cow organizing committee and "certain national Olympic com-mittees" which wanted talks with the constant

The United States committee decided yesterday in endorse President Carter's boycott, called in protest at the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. The committee said an official American team would not go to Moscow unless President Carter informed it by May 20 that there was a change in the situation.

Monicue Berlinux, Director of the IOC, said in Paris last month that the Executive might consider the question of individual participation by athletes whose countries had decided to boycott the Moscow games, al-though it would mean an amendment to the Olympic

Soldier on charge of illegal killing in Ulster

From Christopher Thomas

A British soldier was last night charged with unlawful killing after a woman was shot dead at a Border checkpoint in Northern Ireland while travelling home with her husband and son from a dinner cele-brating her silver wedding anniversary.

Private Robert Reed-David-son, aged 19, of the Argyle and Suther land Highlanders, was remanded in custody at a special court in Strabage, co Tyrone, until May 26.

Mrs Teresa Doberty, aged 43, of Strabane, died when a bullet smashed through the windscreen of a car driven by her husband. It happened on the Ulster side of the permanent Border checkpoint at the Lifford Bridge, outside her home town.

She had spent the evening at the Castle Hotel about an hour's drive away on the other side of the Border in Donegal. Mr. John Doherty, her husband, said at his home in the Belmont district of Strabane, yesterday:
"We ware well away from the We were well away from the checkpoint, about 150 yards or

Mr. Doherty said that after the shooting, he had tried to warn people at the checkpoint by sounding his horn. Nobody came and he walked back.

His wife had worked as a nurse for 11 years at Strabane Hospital, until she retired this year for health reasons.

TUC alarmed at new clause on strikes

By Donald Macintyre
Labour Reporter
The TUC fears that unions could face court and a second face court could face court-ordered damages which will be "very large indeed" as a result of the amendment to the Employment Bill seeking to limit secondary industrial action.

industrial action.

The full extent of TUC private alarm at the Bill's new clause is disclosed in a paper, describing it as "far reaching and dangerous", which is due to go before senior union leaders on Wednesday.

The confidential paper pre-pared for the TUC's Employ-ment Policy and Organization Committee also makes clear that TUC lawyers have been drafting amendments to the Bill-and passing them to Mr Eric Varley, the Opposition's spokes-men or employment.

Varley, the Opposition's spokesmen on employment.

The working paper suggests that the TUC's criticisms, the first detailed ones from union sources to be produced since the clause was published on April 3, should be forwarded both to Mr ames Prior, the Secretary of State for Employment, and to the Parliamentary Labour Party's employment spokesmen.

The TUC secretariat acknowledges that Mr Prior has not sought to abolish immunities from tort proceedings against all secondary action provided that such action is directly simed at disrupting supplies from the employer to a "first customer" or to the employer in dispute from a "first sup-

But it argues broadly that the surviving immunities are so hedged with qualifications that the clause could "be used to attack the legality of some kinds of primary action".

The comment arises in the paper after a remark that the Government bad departed from its original working paper on the subject by proposing the repeal of Section 13(3) of the Employment Protection Act, which declares that neither interference with a contract nor breach of contract should, in trade disputes, constitute "un-lawful means".

In a tone which may suggest to Mr Prior's Cabinet sup-porters that the TUC has been as seriously alarmed by the Bill, as amended, as it would have been by more "hawkish" pro-posals, the TUC paper adds: "The cumulative effect of (the table tennis restrict severely the range of tactics available to trade unionists in dispute to bring champion pressure on employers".

The paper remarks that the usual case against trade unionists is a claim for an injunction. It argues that such injunctions will be much easier to obtain that at present if the new clause is passed.

It adds: "Moreover plaintiffs may well proceed more frequently to a full trial in order to claim damages against trade union officials. If this happened the amounts involved could be very large indeed".

The paper says that the Government has said that secondary action will not be protected against tort proceed-ings for breach of contract when it is taken by employees not currently suppliers or cus-tomers of the firm in dispute; where the purpose is to spread the dispute to other businesses or the community as a whole; where no business is being conducted between the employer in dispute and his customers or suppliers, possibly because of a total strike; and where action is indirect, and where action is indirect, such as disrupting the general business of a supplier.

In addition, the paper says.

"immunity" will be forfeited where secondary action is taken against a potential supplier or without an actual contract with the firm in dispute; where an "associated" employer receives goods normally due to an employer on dispute; and where an employer pays an employer in dispute for supplying and the supp supplying goods or services to its customers, for example in the insurance industry.

Mr Prior said when the new clause was published that it would protect employees and employers alike "from the unwarranted and indiscriminate use of secondary industrial action". He added that as a result of the House of Lords udgment in the case of Express Newspaper's versus MacShane there "is now virtually unlimited immunity for secondary industrial action. That is not a situation any responsible Government could allow to con-

Mr Prior said that the new clause was the direct outcome of the wide consultations undertaken since publication of the working paper. Letters, page 15

Yesterday's London weather, which at a sunny midday 64°F. outshone Athens, Batcelona, Nice and Naples, will continue more or less unabated over most of the country until the end of the month. Then, apart from an occasional short-lived dismal patch, the climate will improve relentlessly through the sum-mer until it reaches the con-sistent mineries in August.

But there is no cause for alarm. Enough rain fell early in the year to forestall any serious drought, and there will be no need for Mrs Thatcher to appoint a witch doctor to the Cabinet, as Mr Callaghan was obliged to appoint the species. obliged to appoint the spectacu-larly successful Mr Denis Howell as Minister for Drought, Snow and Other Natural Phenomena during the freak weather of the Labour government.

state funds granted to opposi-tion parties in Parliament. Mr ames Callaghan, Leader of the Opposition, who has been resisting pressure from the party's national executive to release his courrol over the annual £165,000 political fund from the state, faces a basic

It is understood that Mr Wedgwood Benn, a former Cabinet colleague and chairman of the party's home policy com-mittee, has forwarded a document setting out the reasons why Mr Callaghan should relinquish control. The document has the backing of other committee chairing including Mr Bric Heffer correntation and Bric Heffer, organization, and Miss oan Lestor, international. It argues that Mr. Callaghan should hand over the money to the party's Transport House headquarters and that the executive should write a cheque to meer the expenses of Mr. Calaghan's office.

A fierce argulment is developing that such a proposition could be unconstitutional, because the state funds to opposition parties, first provided when Labour was in government, should go directly to parties at Mesaminster: they were not Westminster; they were not designed for political operations outside Parliament.

Mr Callaghan has seen a group of members of the executive on the issue, including Mr Benn, Mr Heffer and Miss Lestor, and the document is a result of that meeting. A second meeting to discuss the submissions is expected soon.

Mr Callaghan is said to apportion the money as follows: Political Reporter

Labour leaders are involved : 565,000 for the running in a dispute over which wing office; and £100,000 to the Parof the party; should control the liamentary Labour Party, which includes paying for its secre-tariat and advisers to the Shadow Cabinet.

Left-wing members of the executive say they have no objection to funding the leader's office, or that of the parliamentary party, but they believe that there should be greater control over the financing of back-up support for shadow

They believe that advisers should be on the Transport House payroll, if only to guarantee their future careers.

Party finance will figure at a meeting of the international committee tomorrow where a number of mebers are to challenge Mr Callaghau's suggestion that Transport House should pay the expenses of Mr Ronald Hayward, the general secretary, so that he can accopany Mr Callaghan on a visit to China next month.

They argue that because the party has a deficit Mr Callaghan should make the money available out of the leader's office

Other party "flashpoints" could occur for Mr Callaghan could occur for Mr Canagnan tonight at a meeting of the home policy committee. A full agenda includes a proposal that a future Labour Prime Minister should "pack" the House of Lords with party supporters if necessary to achieve legislation for abolition, and the first draft of an NEC statement on policy to be presented to a special party conference on May 31. Mr Paisley attacks Eire dream

Mr Charles Haughey, the Irish Prime Minister, is steadily hardening his public pronouncements over a united Ireland as Dublin and Westminster pre-pare for the first high-level political exchange since he took office in December.

Mr Humphrey Atkins, Secre-tary of State for Northern Ireland, is to travel to Dublin freignd, is to travel to Dubling for his first encounter with Mr Brian Lenihan, the Irish Foreign Minister. There is a security clampdown on the timing of the meeting but it is likely to be held this week.

Mr Haughey, who says he hopes to see a united Ireland in his lifetime, provoked harsh comments yesterday from the Rev Ian Paisley, the Democratic Unionist leader, who said the Dublin Government could give Mr Atkins all the Irish blarney they liked but there would never be a united Ireland as long as there was a Protestant majority in Ulster. Local government elections: Control of Birmingham and Wolverhampton on knife-edge

Rate rises may count against Labour in West Midlands

By Christopher Warman Local Government Correspondent

If the level of rate increases affects the result of local government elections, this is a year when its impact should be obvious. With few exception local elections normally are decided on the national swing of opinion, in which case Labour will gain control of a number of councils in the West Mid-lands, with Birmingham the centrepiece, at the expense of

However, it is possible that those voters who turn out for the district elections on May 1 will be more aware than usual of the disparity between rate rises imposed by Conservative and Labour authorities, and vote accordingly.

It is an issue which Mr Michael Heseltine, Secretary of State for the Environment, and the Conservative leaders have been emphasizing in recent weeks, producing evidence to show that their authorities are obeying Government spending constraints while Labour coun-cils are failing to reduce their Mr Heseltine's threat

Protests against that increase were led by the Confederation of British Industry, which held a press conference to indicate the effects such a rise would have on local industry and com-merce. It was all the confedera-tion could do, since industry and commerce have no vote. In both Bismingham and Wolverhampton the seats being contested on May 1, comprising a third of the total councils, were last fought for in 1976, a good year for the Conservatives. The swing of the pendulum since then should ensure gains for Labour, but the rates issue may change that.

Specialists to face atom cargo protesters By Pearce Wright

The first public meeting on the safety of transporting waste nuclear fuel by rail through London takes place this evening Specialists from the Cen-tral Electricity Generating Board and from British Rail have agreed to face ancioaclear campaigners as well as councillors and ratepayers of London boroughs in Hackney Town Hall at 7.30.

Waste nuclear fuel from the power stations at Bradwell, Essex, Sizewell, Suffolk, and Dungeness, Kent, has been passing through London for more than fifteen years. A review of the safety pre-cautions and of emergency procedures for those cargoes was made recently with local authorities and fire services and an inquiry has started at the request of the Government into the risks of sabotage. Both actions came in response to criticisms by antinuclear groups of bazards to some of the most populated parts of the city if an accident occurred. Opponents of nuclear expansion demonstrated the possibility of damaging a nuclear fuel con-signment by surrounding a train carrying such a cargo in a mock attack with a toy bazooka. Mr Michael Meacher, Labour MP for Oldham, West, has asked the Prima Minister to explain how a special control unit was set up without ministérial per-mission in Wakefield Prison to experiment with psychological rechniques for punishing "subversive" prisoners.

In a letter to Mrs Margaret Thatcher, Mr Meacher says the compol unit, set up for six mouths in 1974, raises serious issues about the accountability of civil servants to ministers. In view of the "extremely disturbing consequences" of non-accountable power illustrated by the case, he has asked the Prime Minister to make a statement indicating what steps will be taken to prevent policy-making "being exempted by administrative officials.". The control unit is the subject of a High Court action in which a prisoner, supported by the National Council for Civil Liberties, is suing the Home Office for what he claims to be an illegal and cruel panishment. Judgment on the case, which ras taken five weeks to bear, is expected from Mr Justice Tudor Evans this week.

Mr Meacher says that it must be asked how the control units

Iranian confidence on sanctions tempered by fear of Moscow

From Edward Mortimer Tehran, April 13

The Iranian regime is confident that it can survive Western economic sanctions but fears that in doing so it may be pushed into closer dependence on the Soviet block than it would wish. That emerged today from an interview given to The Times by Mr Alireza Nobari, the Governor of the Iranian Central Bank.

Mr Nobari cited Cuba and Nasser's Egypt as countries that had to resort to Soviet help in overcoming Western hostility. He appealed to Europe and Japan to help Iran avoid the Cross became so acrimonious that all food supplies and medical care were cut off on occa-sions for as long as a week at a time. Red Cross officials reject allegations that those actions caused some deaths. Nevertheless some independent foreign witnesses as well as Thai officials do not look favourably on some Red Cross and other aid workers at Camp Reahou and elsewhere. Directors of six American relief agencies, after visiting refugee camps recently, con-demned the inclination of relief and indicated that a smaller foreign presence would be a good thing. The English language daily newspaper, the Bangkok Post, published two reports this weekend critical of Red Cross methods at Camp Reahou. To keep food distribution in their own hands, Red Cross officials, according to the reports, were herding hungry refugees into enclosures to queue for rice.

Many of the Kampucheans could not understand

Concern about some foreign relief workers has been apparent for months. The chief difficulties appear to be too many people in some categories of workers, the unsuitability of training and temperament and their inclination, by taking everything into their own hands, to exclude refugees from decisions and even work.

The Thai Government is now considering recommendations made by an official committee that all foreign aid workers should undergo an orientation course in Thailand before going to the camps.

The committee says the course would improve working relationships in the camps and produce better results. The course would be design to increase foreigners' under-standing of That Government rules and methods and of That sights on Guineas double

From an Irish Racing Correspondent Dublin, April 13

Vincent O'Brien saddled his first winner of the new scason when Night Alert won the group three Gladness Stakes at the Curragh on Saturday, but there was little cause for celebration over the result. The Nijiusky colt who had been backed to the exclusion of his 11 rivals appeared likely to win with rivals appeared likely to win with some ease when he took up the running smoothly at the two furlong pole. but a furlong later Piggott had to go for his whip as the opposition began closing the gap. There was a moment when he looked beaten, but he rallied under pressife and in the last 50 yards held on by a diminishing head from the four-tear-old Noelino.

Another neck away, third, came Johnny O'Day, who had done only one piece of fast work since the end of last year and who drifted in the betting from 4 to 1 out to 20 to 1. Johnny O'Day had beaten Night Alert at Leopardstown last September and I believe that if he had been as fit as the winner

he had been as fit as the winner the photograph would have gone his way. Likewise the distance was all too short for Noelino and with a little further to travel he would a little further to travel he would have been an ourright winner.

Night Alert is likely to be the O'Brien representative in the Irish 2,000 Guineas and the trainer also had news of his English 2,000 Guineas runner. Monteverdi, who was beaten the previous Saturday at Phoenix Park. O'Brien is keen that the trainer to the trainer and the previous saturday.

that he should have another run before Newmarket and plans to bring him over to Newbury this weekend for the Clerical Medical Greenham Stakes.

Greenham Stakes.

The runner-up goes to Saudown later in April for the Westbury Stakes and, with a view to testing this Derby potential Adrian Maxwell will send Johnny O'Day to Epsom next week for the Blue Ribband Trial Stakes.

The Paddy Predergast horses are in tip top form and his Racquette, which he owns and bred landed a gamble in the April Filities Stakes by a length from Etoile de Paris. Beaten nearly five lengths into fourth place here was the O'Brien filly, Forlene, who wrote herself out of the English 1,000 Guineas picture.

The Earl of Donoughmore attending the races for the first time since a recent illness, got a boost when his home bred, Loriot, sprang a surprise in the Boyne Three-Year-Old Maiden Stakes.

O'Brien sets | Nureyev performance seen in perspective

By Michael Seely

work's expects in the recips world. week's events in the racing world.
We are now on the threshold of the most informative five days racing so far this season, with important classic trials at Newmarket and Newbury. But before going through that door, it is important to get Nuryev's victory into perspective.

General opinion seems to be that Stavros Niarchos's elegant little colt stands at too short a price for the 2,000 Guineas. But Nuryey for the 2,000 Guineas. But Nurvey has set the standard and some might say what a standard! One eminent critic wrote on Saturday that Monteverdi put up a better performance when failing to give Nikoli 71b at Phoenix Park than did Nurvey when handing out a six-length beating to Viteric in France, His opinion may well turn out to be correct, but judged on the basis of the form book alone it is utter nonsense. it is utter nonsense. Consider the facts. In Ireland,

Monteverdi who was rated joint top with the French colt, Dragon, in the international classification top with the French colt, Dragon, in the international classification of the 1979 two-year-olds, was beaten one and a half lengths by Nikoll. Paddy Frendergast's colt, the winner of a maiden race at Phoenix Park last season, may be improving, but he was only allotted 7 st 10 ib in the Irish Free Handicap, as aaginst Monte-yerdi's 9 st 7 lb. So, at the most conservative estimate Robert Sangster's three-year-old must have run well over a stone below have run well over a stone below his best. Viteric, on the other hand, won Viteric, on the other hand, won a group two race in France last season, and was placed 6lb below Monteverdi and 5 lb below Nuryev in the international classification. In addition, Viteric was razorsharp last Tuesday, having run well in his previous outing this season. So again, taking a cautions view, Nuryev seems to have improved 7lb since last year.

Now let us look at it historically. Now let us look at it historically. Wollow for example, was rated 127 by Timeform at the end of his 127 by Timeform at the end of his two-year-old career. The following winter, after having won the 2,000 Guineas, the Eclipse Stakes—on the disqualification of Trepan—and the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup, Renry Cecil's three-year-old was assessed at 132. Timeform have rated Nuryev at 124 with a "P" for likely improvement against his name. So surely he must now be pushing against the 130 barrier, which is well above the rating needed to win an averthe rating needed to win an aver-official handicappers are a little bit out in their reckoning, Nuryev's fine powers of acceleration, as witnessed by Michael Phillips and other reliable witnesses, taken in conjunction with the colt's home-work with the four-year-old conjunction with the colf's homework with the four-year-old Boltron provide further proof of the favourite's excellence. And those who disregard the golden opinions of François Boutin and his lockey, Philippe Paquet, do so at their peril.

Next Saturday's Greenham Stakes at Newbury is going to be the race which matters. The promised meeting between Monteverdi—confirmed a certain runner by Elaine Makein gave Scotland the lead in the first half against Wales, and Janet Evans to equalize well in the second half. It was the England and Netherlands game which gripped the crowd. England's Amanda Smith, from West Yorkshire, scored in the first minute. Neither side could give ground and these inexperienced young players plotted and schemed in a mature fashion. The Dutch, who do not play hockey at school belong to mixed clubs to learn their hockey with their elders. Their corner hitting at almost professionally hand stopped corners was ruthless. It took a brave defence player to thwart them and Louise Butter was just such a one. She was out from the back line like a flash but it was not surprising that Sels Koddie eventually scored the equalizer from a corner. his third goal.

Rotterdam, April 13
Racing-fit from the circuit of the Ardennes, the French and Czechoslovak national teams will prove the severest of tests for the quality of Britain's Moscow prospects when the third Sealink International opens here, in Holland for a change, tomorrow afternoon. A blow to the Great Britain team, managed by Jim Hendry, the national director of racing, is the withdrawal through injury of the Eindhoven-based Steve Jones. who hails from Birmingham but is part and parcel now of the Dutch racing scene. He is replaced by Jeff Williams, of Manchester, such as the right to switch to the coad if Sealink indicate he should.

A dull, grey afternoon when red meant anything but danger

It was a mistake to hope that It was a mistake to hope that the FA Cup semi-final round the between a dulled Liverpool and dull Arsenal at Hillsborough would be better than the coaches and managers predicted. To discover that the twin fixture at Villa Park was everything that this goalless, unadventurous ordeal of nerves was not, merely added envyto frustration. lo frustration.

The excuses were legion, but not all legitimate. Arsenal, it was said, were jaded after playing a League game on Monday, with several reserves, and a Cup Winners' Cup the on Wednesday. Try telling the winner of the Your de France that such a programme is too demanding, and to their credit the players did not excuse themselves on that score. Two Arsenal defenders were not fully fit. Liverpool were without McDermott and Alan Kennedy. But the most obscure reason given for a sloppy game with the bright sunshine combined with a Heady if the breeze, a firm pitch and "lively ball."

There was no need to contrive the said of the breeze of the pitch and the said of the said of the breeze of the pitch and the bright sunshine combined with a Heady if the breeze as firm pitch and "lively ball."

There was no need to contrive apologies for sterility. Simply, Liverpool played poorly by their standards and lost the confidence to take the game by its scriff. No one wanted to risk failure in attack and the defence gave no cause for confidence. Arsenal, with Brady playing so deeply and quietly that he seemed to have withdrawn to the library, were objectional about square or back passes occasionally varied by long, uncontrolled clearances.

The game should have been won by Liverpool, but could have been by Arsenal who came within a crossbar's width of scoring in the final minutes. If anyone in the Arsenal team deserved hetter than it see his lob drop on to the bar with Clemence and the other liverpool defenders watching help-lessly it was Talbot, whose utilitarian approach to the match was entivened by his willingness to run from the back through the often square Liverpool defence. Liverpool had enough early Liverpool had enough earry chances to have had a comfortable second half. Then Arsenal forced them into a submissive attitude that was indicative of Liverpool's uncertainty and unease at having to accommodate two comparatively increased and mamber. Les and macertainty and unease et having to accommodate two comparatively inexperienced members. Lee and Irwin. Although not the cause of their poor display, the fact that Kennedy was not there overlapping when players wanted to pass the ball wide certainly hampered their instinctive notions. Additionally, Case began unhappily on the flank and finished a miserable day with a shoulder injury that forced him to miss the last half an hour and perhaps even the replay.

Tame shooting and not enough of it destroyed Liverpool's considerable territorial advantages and Arsenal were left with the opportunity to pluck a third successive Cup Final appearance if only they could break a precarious offside trap. At one point Clemence ran 30 yards to clear from Stapleton and later be did much the same when the Liverpool defence again lacked collective understanding.

Until Taibot sprinted through the Liverpool ranks and lifted the ball over Clemence it seemed that the mistakes would go unpumished. As the lob hung in, the air, the fate of Liverpool depended on a zeptyr. The ball struck the bar and was kicked, away. That moment will remain the most framatic memory from a semi-final that the uncommitted local spectators complained was the greyest they had seen.

West Ham 1 Everion 1
The tide is turning from the Mersey to the Thames. London's chances of holding at least half of the Wembley stage were lifted by the drasha that unfolded at Villa Park on Saturday. In a blaze of incidents heared by the afternoon sun, the heroes of the second division, West Ham United, picked themselves up from the dusty floor and soil but brushed their way, past the villains from the first, Everton.

At the centre of the piece, like a stray voice from a Greek chords, wandered Mr Seel, who made several significant, if not appropriate, speeches. This memorable FA Cup semi-final may have finished on even terms but the take was littered with oddities. It was odd, for instance, that, among the humping and bording, Mr Seel should award a penalty when Devoushire scarcely made contact with King as they rose in vain to meet a cross.

Devonshire, of placid nature, pleaded his innocence so yehem.

pleaded his innocence so vehem-ently that he was booked. Stewart, jumping to his defence, suffered

It was curious that Mr Seel, in It was curious that Mr Seel, in the minutes that remained before the interval, should not have shown the red card to Ross. Having lectured him and then booked him for two grinding tackles on Pearson, he reached into his pocket after Ross had hacked Brooking down but did nothing more than deliver presumably the same lecture. H Ross was fortunate to stay on, kidd was as unfortunate to go off.

As West Ham took control of As West Ham took control of the second half, Stewart tangled with Kidd under the nose of a linesman. They wrested briefly, each conceding a fall, and then waited for the referee's decision as he conferred with his colleague on the touchline, It was mystifying that Kidd should be dismissed, as he was against Wigau in the fourth round, and that Stewart suffered

It was surprising that when West Ham finally made their pres-sure tell, the scorer should be a similar fate. Kidd, with admirable assurance, remained calm several ailments and he was limpared the confusion and beat parket, a feat that had twice been beyond Eastoe.

The property of the several ailments and he was limpared as well as clutching his shoulder when Brooking made only his second run to the byline. Shrugging off what had second almost Pearson. He had complained of several aliments and he was limping as well as clutching his shoulder when Brooking made only his second run to the byline. Shrugging off what had seemed almost unbearable pain, Pearson was there to meet the cross, sidefoot it home and give that characteristic salute—with his good arm. When he was substituted minutes later, both scorers had left the arena. The riddles of Villa Park will remain, for no one took the chance to make their name Park will remain, for no one took the chance to make their name in the furious, ragged finish except for the two goalkeepers. Hodge's saves from Stewart and Bonds kept his side still standing on Wembley's doorstep.

Act two starts at 7.30 on Wednesday at Elland Road. Everton will be without Kidd, their leading scorer, and will have to adjust their balance, heavily weighted to the left. Apart from Parkes's early saves from Eastoe and a couple of late scrambles, theirs was a secondary role once West Ham had found their feet. Latchford may have scored in every round so far but his main diet is crosses and, with Thomas now absent, he may be starved.

West Ham found the net five times but four were ruled out—the last, two minutes from time by the finest of offside decisions. Bonds, after an early error, not only led the revival but also helped to pump belief into the blood of his fellow youngsters. West Ham know now that they can add to their list of first division victims.

Holland is were than Ambard.

Holland is more than doubtful for the replay but Pearson and Lampard should be fix. The heaviest burden, though, falls on Brooking, who is accustomed to it, and Devonshire, who is not yet. Once he was a boy who had to be sent home by taxi suffering from exhaustion, so diligently did he train on his first day at Upron Park. On Wednesday he can become the man who belped to lead his side to the 1980 Cup Final.

Derby County and Bristol City have less cause for optimism. Only Everton among their rivals in the cut-throat business of relegation have their concentration divided. The unexpected achievement of two points at Wolverhampton on Saturday by that appalling side, Manchester City, silenced the merriment of victories by Bristol City and Derby County. The atmosphere at Asinton Gete must have been particularly unpleasant as the relegation of Bolton Wanderers was confirmed in a gladiatorial battle from which there my be no was confirmed in a gladiatorial battle from which there my be no survivor. Derby, 3—0 winners over Brighton, will find little cheer in the knowledge that on recent form they do not deserve to go down.

Encouragement is something which many people in Manchester believe Andy Ritchle, a 19-year-old striker, has not received at United. With players like Jordan and Macari barring the way it is not surprising that promotion has been difficult. But when Jordan was injured between September and November it was an ideal opportunity to give the proven young goalstorer a decent run in the first team. Instead United brought in Grimes and played the wee Macari and Coppell as their front men. It is now a case of perming any three from six, the two likeliest candidates being Leicester City and Sunderland, both of whom have 48 points from 38 games. Of all the contenders Leicester were the only winners on Saturday and they were exceptionally good value for their 2—1 success over Birmingham City. They would have won with more to spare had O'Nelli not needlessly handled to concede the 80th minute penalty from which Gemmill precipitated an anxious last 10 minutes. Wallington, however, with body correctly behind every shot, particulated. rectly behind every shot, particu-larly two from Curbishley, safely averted a disaster. In conditions, a sun-baked sur-face and slight breeze, that were hardly conducive to such enter-prising football, Leicester crased the early forbodings caused by the number of hefty clearances from both sets of defenders, to treat their largest crowd of the season to a display that augured well

Earlier Smith had been the focal point of most of Leicester's shrewdly constructed forays, many of which originated deep in Leicester's balf when Birmingham pressed forward in an attempt to reduce their 2—0 interval deficit. The Scot with the rolling locks linked well with the more orthodox Young, was always likely to twist past his man in tight to twist past his man in tight situations, possessed the ability to situations, possessed the ability to expose the offside trap with Gemmill out of sorts on the rare occasions he was allowed a kick by his effective escort Williams, Birmingham were in danger of being overrun. Having survived the subsequent alarms, however, they were put within reach of saving the game when time expired on them. Leicester's first goal had arrived in the 12th minute when Wilson left Wealands transfixed on his line with a low shot from 30 yards. Fittingly, the second goal on the half-hour was the end product of

In a game in which neither side played with any real distinction the visitors won by three tries and a penalty to two penalties. Conditions, perfect underfoot, were again made difficult by the blustery wind and this made for an untidy game. Even though Clegg and Moriarty for Swanses were able to gain a supply of line out possession, it was uncontrolled, so that both Williams and Dacey in the first half with the wind at their backs could not command the tempo. With such obvious unease in the backs, both Lakin and Lease added to Swanses's discomfiture by playing a disruptive game. Unable to settle down to any pattern, Swanses were ahead by only six points at halftime through Roger Blythe's two penalty goals.

There were glimpses in the Roger Biythe's two penalty goals.

There were glimpses in the second half of the fluency which has made Swansea such an attractive combination this year. Both Davies and Swift on the wings came close to scoring after the good work of the centres Meredith and Jenkins, but without the essential creative spark of David Richards at stand-off half, who is resting in preparation for the Lions' tour, these attacks were insufficient for the team to gain sustained momentum.

were insufficient for the team to gain sustained momentum.

As the game wore on it was Cardiff who grew more commanding and in the last period of 13 minutes they scored all their points. After Webber had kicked a penalty, Barry hoisted a high kick to Swansea's posts and with Geoff Davies, the Swansea wing unable to gather, Hutchins went in to score. The second try came when Williams who had an efficient game at scrum half combined with Scott to create the space for Lease's try and hearfull time Cardiff's hooker. Watkins, came speeding away from a mant to let Carl Smith in for the final try. final try. MANSEA: R. Biythe, A. Swift: G.

by the water protecting the 12th. He lost three more, there.

With the fallure of all the other big names, the way for Ballesteros was wide open. His nearest rival, if that is not too much of an exaggeration, after three rounds, was Ed Fiori, a man with a record as long as your little fingernail. He had seven strokes to make up, one fewer than four men of greater stature, Jack Newton, Graham, J. C. Snead (all winners of the Australian Open) and Andy North, who has represented the United States in the inaptly named World Cup.

Nicklaus, Floyd, Miller, Trevino and Crenshaw were all reduced to also-rans, and even Player, with all his remarkable powers of recovery, could hardly expect to give Ballesteros 10 strokes and a beating. The lady in the airline reservation office said on our arrival at the course this morning, "this day is going to be a big bore". For less discerning Americans, and oubt that was the case, but European fellow travellers could hardly hide their delight, mixed with a little touch of innocent (I hope) malice. In the first semi-final Rogers, the Worcester Taverners' wicker keeper, was apparently steering his team to victory only to be run out when it seemed that the halls were removed before his opposite number had the ball in his gloves. In the second tie the previously prolific Wanstead batsmen came badly unstuck against Hardy, Brown and co: hostile bowling, particularly by the West Indian, Charles, and demon-like fielding were not enough to see them through.

Efforts of three are outstanding

By Athole Still
Britain's swimmers overwhelmed their opposition in winning the team trophy at the International event sponsored by Coca Cola at event sponsored by Coca Cota 21 Leeds, over the weekend. They can draw little satisfaction from their victory, however, for the meeting could barely be described as a competition and only rarely did performances approach a genuine international level. The A Geordie named Alan Hardy furned the clock back at Lord's on Saturday when his leg-spin bowling helped Percy Main, from the cricketing outpost of Northumberland, to win the lifth Wrigley Trophy indoor six-a-side club championship. On a glorious afternoon, better suited to playing outdoors, Hardy span his canny web to baffling effect and had the purises purring with delight. It was an education for the Whitmore brothers, aged 15 and 17, in the combined Leicestershire village team, Narborough and Little-thoroe, whom Percy Main beat continentably in the final.

Hardy, aged 35, provided the risiting entry was the poorest in the history of the event, and with the history of the event, and with a few exceptions, the races were little more than public training swims, particularly for the British women, who won every event except one, over the three days. The exceptions to the above well-intended reservations were the efforts of our three leading swimmers, Margaret Kelly and Duncan Goodhew thoth Beckenham McLaren) and Sharron Davies (Kelly Wimpey). The first two had victories on Saturday, which confirmed their placings in world breaststroke sprinning, and Miss Davies boosted her fading fortunes with fine victories in both individual medleys.

Goodhew had most reason to be content after destroying the World record-holder, Gerald Merken (West Germany), 100-1018 contortably in the final.

Hardy, aged 35, provided the only relief from a diet of seam and his success—four for six in his three overs in the semi-final round and one for 11 in the final—again illustrated the value of a good slow bowler. The former England captain, Freddie Brown, himself a leg-spinner, recognized Hardy's achievements, which also included two runouts and a Catch, by adjudging, him player of the day.

Chickens can surely be counted, the champagne bottles placed confidently on ice and laurel leaves ordered from the florist in Bradford. Odsal Stadium will surely celebrate on Wednesday evening as Bradford Northern's victory over Workington vertexing means. over Workington yesterday means that they need only beat relegated Runslet on Wednesday to win the first division chempionship for the first time.

There is nothing certain under the sun but a Hunslet victory when Northern need the points for the championship would defy all form, logic and experience. Peter Fox and his men can thus maintain the remarkable record of trophies won during the reign of the talkable but inspiring Bradford coach, who is in the Brian Clough class when It comes to the perfect combination of the abrasive and the inspiritional.

Northern, despite conceding 10 pts during a slack defensive spell just before half-time won comfortably enough against Workington, ratiling in vital tries at the start of each half and always looking in control. Leading the onslaught was David Redfearn who scored four tries with speedy running and intelligent support play. Gant got a last trick and Okulics got the eighth try, with goals coming from Stephenson (2), Ferres and Carroll.

ponents who only fell away during the second half.

The final play-off placings in the first division still lie open. Leigh seem likely to make the top eight after heating Blackpool Borough 38-0 to continue their impressive recent run, but Warrington kept their hopes harely alive with a 20-12 victory at York. Once again Warrington were grateful for the accurate boot of Steve Hesford, who kicked seven goals in eight attempts while his opposite number Horner could only land three goals from nine attempts. Tight turn claims eight disqualifications

By a Special Correspondent A high rate of failure among the top ranking German contenders yesterday enabled British girls to take four of the first six-places in the women's giant slalom event of the British alpine ski championships, sponsored by Philips, being held over four days on Cairngorm,

The title was taken by Petra Wenzl, of Llechtenstein, the sister of Hanni, a double gold medal winner at Lake Placid. Second was Heidi Wiesler, of Second was Heidi Wiesler, of Germany, bronze medal winner in the giant slatom at the Winter Olympics, and the next four places were taken respectively by the English girl, Valentina liffe, and Scotland's Kirstin Cairns, Ann Robb and Pelicity Blyth.

High winds have made conditions difficult on the first two days of the event but it seemed to be the setting of the first run yesterday, one created by British junior team coach, Peter Lorenz, which accounted for a high number of disqualifications. One gate, a tight nurn, followed by a hummock, claimed eight competitors, including Continental internationals; Ursula Konsett (Liech. nationals; Ursula Konsett (Liechtenstein), Andrea Niklas, Erigitte Sirch and Traudi Hacher (Germany).

After the first russ size lead was held by Christa Zechnassser, of Germany, slalom silver medal winner at Lake Placid and the propulates trial ever to size a Woold youngest girl ever to win a World Cup race, followed by Miss Wenzl and Miss Wiesler.

Miss Zechmeister was only a

Miss Zechmeister was only a quarter way down the second run when she, too, missed a gate, along with the other German international. Monika Berwein, leaving Miss Wiesler the only member of her team to complete the two runs. Irene Epple, who won the silver medal in the giant sialom at the Olympics, had been confirmed as an entrant for the championships but left her colleagues puzzled by failing to appear.

Miss Wenzl's combined time for the two runs was 2min 15.39sec,

Miss Wenzl's combined time for the two runs was 2min 15.39sec, the times of Miss Iliffe. Miss Cairns, Miss Robb and Miss Blyth being 2min 17.19sec, 2min 17.22sec, 2min 18.19sec and 2min 21.10sec The men's giant salom was won on Saturday by Ernst Riedelsperger, of Austria. The best British performances came from the eost coast Scots, Martin Bell and Alan Stewart, who took fifth and sinth places, respectively.

La fanciulla del West Covent Garden

Coliseum

William Mann

The current series of opera Proms at Covent Garden inchided at the weekend a major revival of Puccini's proto-Spaghetti Western. If anyone, having only consulted one of the bad old books about that the bad old books about that composer, wondered anxiously whether the pound note being paid for a stalls seat (on the floor with 699 other promenaders) was being thrown away on sacond-class Puccini, then Giuseppe Patanè's precise, anergetic conducting of the score could only bring sighs of refered.

His view, readily reflected His view, readily reflected by the sumptuous, punctual playing of the Royal Opera House orchestra, can explain why The Girl of the Golden West, long disparaged, has now everywhere become a desirable operatic property. So do Ken Adam's settings for the ROH production, chiefly that for the Polka Saloon, solid and detailed enough to grace every comboy enough to grace every cowboy movie you best loved (even that inenortal scene involving Harpo end the feather duster), the perfect response to Puccini's score, though I pity the scene shifters.

The return of Piero Faggioni, to supervise his costumes, lighting and production, could be assumed from the continuoe assumed from the commu-ing good estate of all, three years after they were new. Likewise from the coherence of the stage performance, even with a new hero and heroine, several others in the large cast, and the conductor as well.

Chiefly we were expecting Jon Vickers as Dick Johnson, but he seems to be ganuinely ill, so the part fell to Giuseppe Giacomini, new here but an tion in museum-style experienced exponent of it in a superior museum.

Twelfth Night Aldwych

Ned Chaillet 'Most wonderful!" is an exclamation that comes so ecstatically from the lips of Kate Nicholls that all the confusions of twinship are lifted to a lustier plane. Miss Nicholls is Olivia the countess so enchan-ted by Vlola in her disguise as a boy that she reckiessly pur-sues her until she inadvertently marries her twin brother. The greedy joy of her "most won-derful" comes when she sees the two together, Viola still dressed as the mirror of her brother.

Terry Hands, the director, takes that moment and playfully amplifies it for his conclusion, with a round of eager embraces that barely discriminates between the sexes in its rich entanglement of brother and sister and brothers and sisters to new marriages. Resounding by new marriages. Resounding as the laughter is in that joy,

A concert of twentieth-century music on Saturday night was primarily a showcase for the work of Christopher Bodman, a Warwick composer Just turned 30 with a versatile range of chamber music to his credit. The five items performed here illustrated a style that has apparently metamorphosed, during the 10 years they represented, from a genial romantic, through the analytic surrealist of his Italian studies with Franco Donatoni, to a continuing open outlook and a more assured focus of experiment in the most recent work to be included, the Music for the Mariage of Tutnikhamen, which dates from 1978. In this, the composer has responded to an image of Friday's programme by the National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain was curiously mixed, yet served to demon-strate this ensemble's varied capacities. An impressive start was made in Brahms's Piano Concerto No. 1, the strings achieving instant tension of phrasing.

True, such things as the diminuendo leading to scloist's first entry were less than immaculate, but one has long since ceased to wonder at this orchestra and the general standard of execution in this The abrupt vulgarities of the edition seems higher than ever. first movement of Shostakomade, with new sets again by Stefanos Lazaridis, for touring purposes. Informed gossip has hinted that it will replace last year's new production; I would be glad, since the plainness is all gain, to the spectacle (in-cluding the handsome costumes), to the real drama of love triangle and filial loyalty, and to the score as well. Only the ballet in the Triumph Scene is even more irrelevant and ab-surd than its predecessor, if that can be imagined. John Read's lighting had still to find the expected poise.

Interest chiefly centred on the new Aida, Linda Esther Grzy, who sang such a poetic Isolde for WNO last year. Verdi's Ethiopian princess is more obviously within her young voice, and there were many shafts of vocal colour, lovely phrasing, expressive flexibilities, indicative of a glorious interpretation in the making. Her verbal enunciation of the English text was exceptionally audible and truthful.

Architecture under fortune's umbrella

Fella

By J. M. Richards (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, £10)

Sir James Richards was editor of the Architectural Review for more than 30 years and for more than 20 architectural corespondent of The Times. His work as an architectural writer and editor has over the years had an enormous influence on architecture in Britain. The title of his memoirs, he explains, derives from the anonymous quarrain:

The rain it raineth every day Upon the just and the unjust fella. But more upon the just, because The unjust hath the just's umbrella.

Richards as he sees himself has repeatedly in his 72 years National Opera returned to St benefitted from being not only Aida in the revised production sheltered by fortune's brolly, but from being somehow propelled by it into all sorts of situations to be envied by less favoured individuals. Look at some of the names and places his memoirs recall; in his 20s colleagues and/or friend of John Summerson, John Betjeman; "Harry "Moore, and John Piper among others; travelled widely for the Review and got to know such pioneers of the Modern Movement as Alvar Aslan as survives Missers of Aalto; as wartime Ministry of Information man in Cairo, had Information man in Cairo, had as colleagues Osbert Lancaster and Patrick Kinross; was guided round Rhodes by Lawrence Durrell; while in Cairo, ste frequent lunches cooked by Elizabeth David; and for some time had his socks sent for darning via the diplomatic bas.

diplomatic bag. Yet this sensitive, diffident man apologizes too much. He lements more than once that his work was never original. Few people's is, But his has frequently been unusually perceptive—and that is almost as rare and quite as valuable. He is also serious without being solemn or pompous; and these memoirs are spattered with deficious and often self-deprecating anecdotes: the youthful Richards who took

Memoras of an Unjust pains to secure postcards of Bexhill-on-Sea to send, covered with exotic postage stamps, from Florence to friends in the Sussex resort, until it was explained to him that this was not a required courtesy—the Ponte Vecchio would do; the grass-bachelor Richards searching out Quaker Oats in the Army & Navy Stores' forage department having thought the doorman said "Porridge Department"; the Finnish architect with a succession of misters of whom he currently tresses, of whom he successively tired but whom he wished to assure of a livelihood-so when an expensive sewing machine was delivered, the girl of the moment perfectly understood that it was time to pack her bags and depart without fuss. Two serious points of some Two serious points of some importance demand mention. First, Richards retains his belief in the spirit and principles of "the Modern Movement"; it is the often abysmal misapplication of those principles that has dismayed and disenchanted him. (He makes the point incidentally that it the point, incidentally, that it was the modern architects of the Mars group who fought the first conservationist battles for then unfashionable Georgian buildings.)

Secondly, he writes in some despair of the failure of most newspapers, including The Times, to give effective and adequate coverage to architecture. socquare coverage to architec-ture, by insisting on treating it as an expendable element in the news columns rather than what it ought to be, a staple element of the Arts or Features pages. He seems unaware, in his account of parting company with The Times the he did with The Times, that he did have a successor, who strug-gled with much the same difficulties for two or three years; or that The Thunderer now provides a more effective coverage of architecture from the pen of Charles McKean, though still not with the prominence or regularity it deserves.

All in all, J. M. Richards emerges as a warm, witty, sen-sitive, if somewhat shy and touchy individual. What matters is not that he had the just fella's umbrella, but the good and entertaining use he made of it.

" England, too, should be seeing these plays " . . . but O'Casey remains a controversial figure even in Dublin, where Ned Chaillet reports on the main centenary celebration same is true of English producers for that matter, and though this year is O'Casey's centenary the English stage will be lucky if it sees more than Juno and the Paycock and Shadow of a Guman. We might have had the third of the early plays as well, but the National Theatre did The Plough and the Stars in the previous decade.

There is no good excuse for the neglect of the later plays, but it is possible to see why directors are wary of them. They call for productions which marry the conflict of poetry, song, comedy, pathos and pageantry and it is no easy thing to achieve. Nor is there any reason that it should be easy, but the relative simplicity of the Dublin trilogy is sedurof the Dublin trilogy is seductive.

Hugh Hunt, who has directed the 'Abbey Thearre's second major O'Casey production of the year, Red Roses for Me, has roused the chorus of critical nay-sayers once again but has managed to bring off a performance with enormous audience appeal. Sagely shak-ing their heads, the critics have laid the bulk of their complaints with O'Casey and congratulated the company for doing so well, all things considered.

The delighted laughter of the audience is a more sensible reaction, for O'Casey has pro-vided much comedy in his rale of a poetical young man who becomes involved in a strike, losing his Catholic girlfriend and his life for his troubles. True enough, every character is an attitude personified, a voice for militancy, or for moderation, or for surrender. moderation, or for surrender, but the ideas bounce merrily from character to character and the dreamy idealism of Ayamonn Breydon is a beguiling focus, a centre which holds the Irish currents of Protestantism, Catholicism, free-thinking and Irish critics will not let so of the idea that Sean O'Cesey ideas, a place for debates on wrote only three plays. The same is true of English prodifferent kinds of Christians, and Mr Hunt lingers comfortably on that poetical realism.

But he shies away from O'Casey's more adventurous moments, turning the chorus of followers of Our Lady of Ebiana into a naturalistic crowd instead of using them formally in a way which could prepare the audience for the visionary leap of the second balf.

It is the scene on a bridge over the Liffey that makes the most demands on a production, for O'Casey attempts to show at once the reakity of poverty and the duliness of lives without dreams, and to lift that out dreams, and to lift that heavy world to the level of Ayamonn's dazzling dream of a just and golden future. The river, the people and the city must change in front of one's eyes, in a leap from apathy to ecstary and a decline back into gloom. That that scene works is more due to Tanya Moiseiwitsch's spectacular serting than to the grudging infusion of poetry that Mr Hunt adiows. It is as if he too is comparing the play to the trilogy, trying to show that it is their equal and not some thing very different.

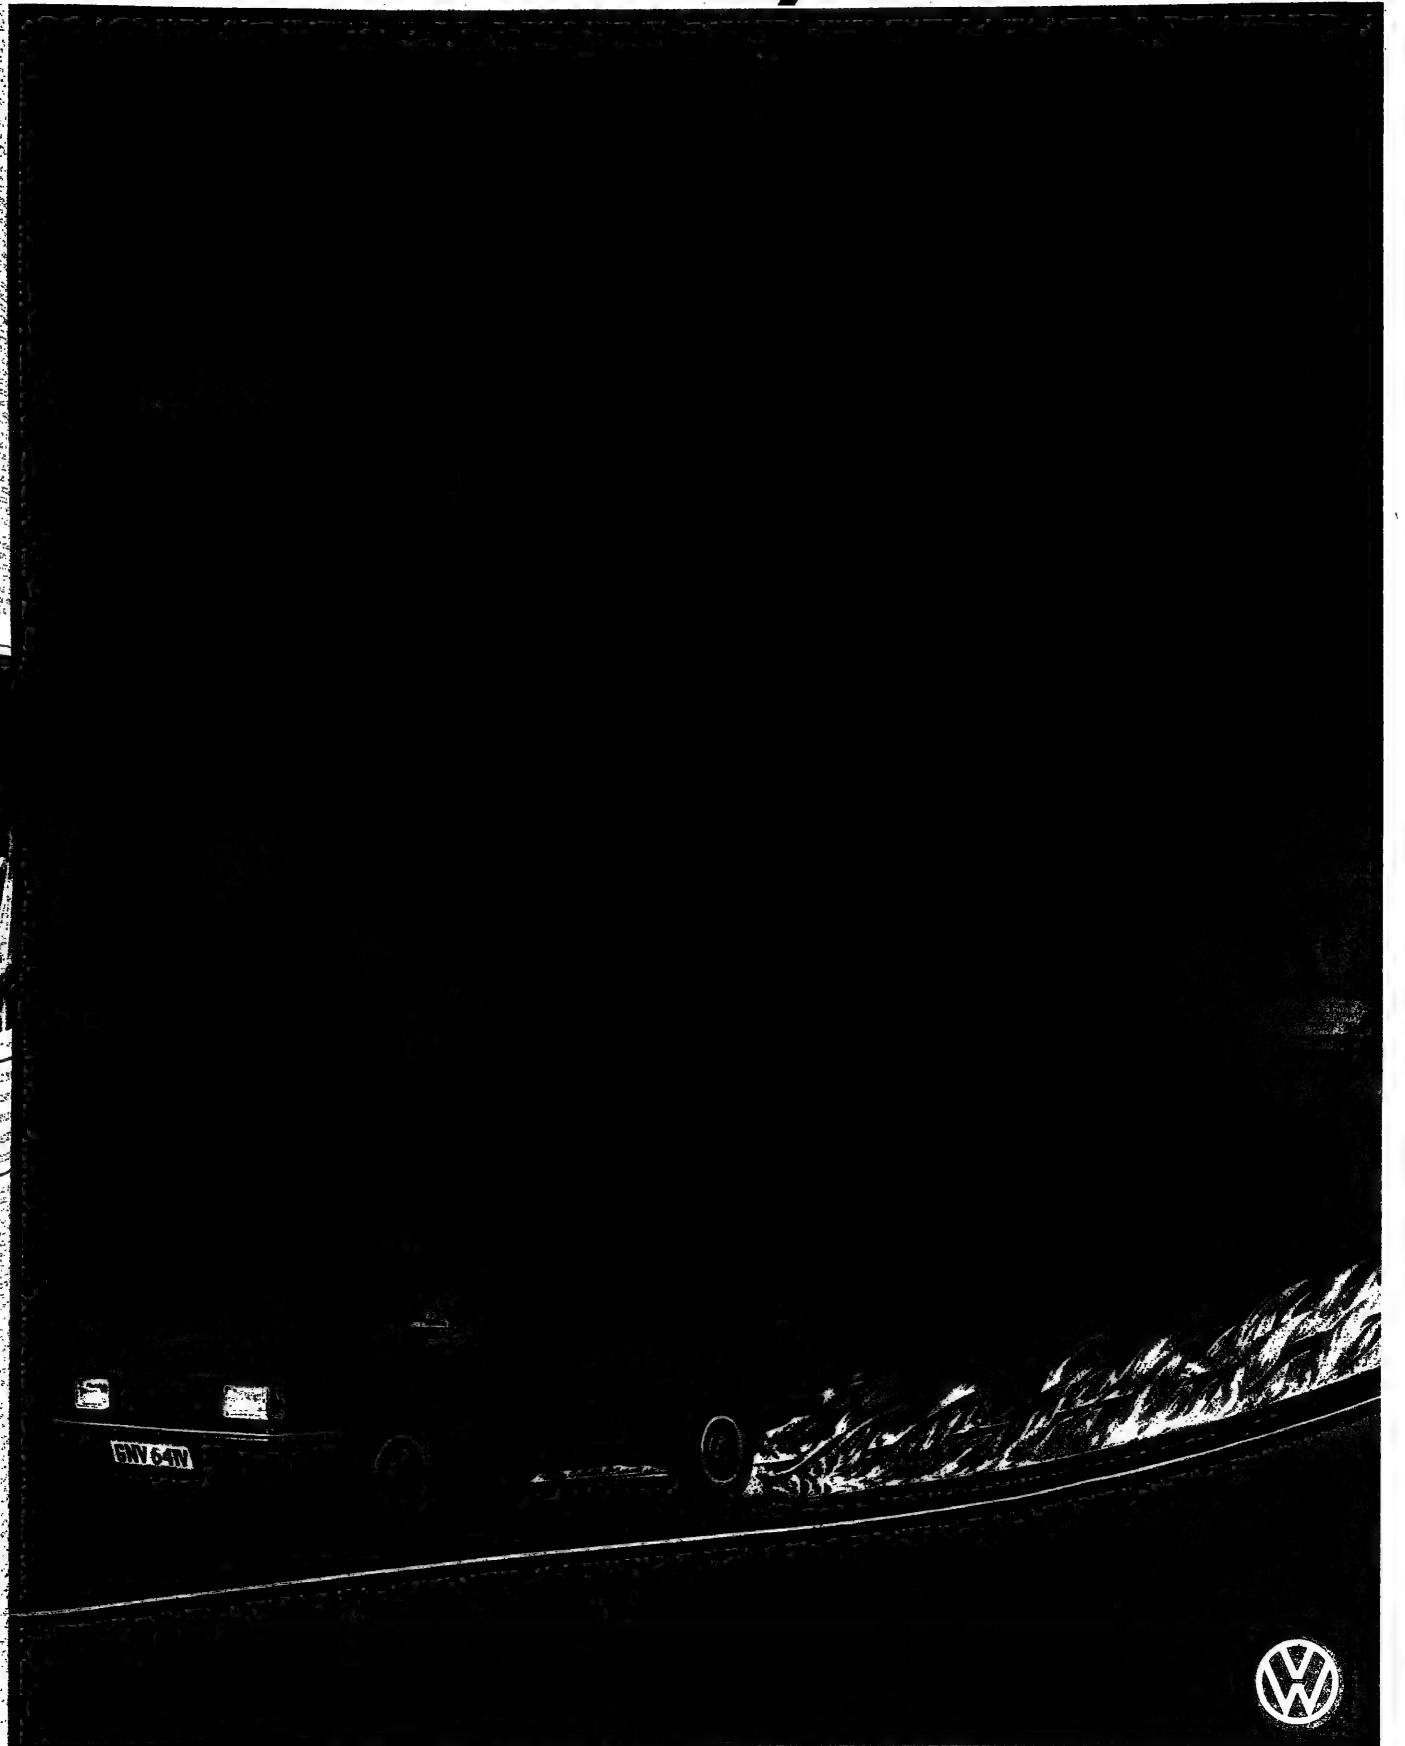

Stephen Brennan captures a Stephen Breunan captures a poetical grace for Ayamonn that is perhaps slightly understated and lacking in the heroic dimension but which holds the play on course. Because Mr Hunt keeps the production naturalistic and comic, Ayamonn's death loses the impact monn's death loses the impact that it might have, but there is still the final glorious moment when Ray McAnally as Brennan O' the Moor sings "Red Roses for Me" to the open church

There is an obviousness to the later plays that makes them look simplistic, but it is the simplicity of fairy tales with rumbling depths beneath. The Abbey has done well to take the challenge but England. the challenge, but England, too, For half the play, Ayamonn's should be seeing these plays.

The first declaration in modern times of the fundamentals of Islam

How the Muslim should lead his life

A Universal Islamic Declaration was promulgated at the opening of the International Islamic Conference in the Royal Albert Hall on Saturday. It has been described as the first authoritative statement of the Muslim faith issued by a representative Muslim body in modern times, and it was drafted with western non-Muslims in mind. Here is the statement of the fundamentals of Islamic faith which forms the first part of the Declaration, and which is followed by a more detailed exposition of the application of Islamic principles to modern society.

Islam approaches life and its problems in their totality. Being a complete and perfect code of life, it holds no brief for partial reforms or compromise solutions. It starts by making man conscious of his unique position in the universe, not as a selfsufficient being but as a part, a very important part, of Allah's creation. It is only by becoming conscious of their true relation-Ship with Allah and His creation that men and women can function successfully in this

Islam brings man close to Allah and cnables him to gain a true perception of reality and builds, on that basis, his relationship in harmony with the entire creation. Islam emphasises that man has been created as Allah's vice-regent (khalifa) (The Koran 2:30), and all that exists is there for him to barness. Allah has endowed him with great potentialities and has provided all that he needs in the world around him.

However, to make the best use of Allah's bounties, man needs Divine guidance. Allah has provided this guidance in its final form in the Koran and the traditions of the Prophet Mohammed (Sunnah). This guidance is an unfailing recipe for success in this world and in the hereafter. Islam is a faith, a way of life, and a movement for the establishment of the Islamic order in the world. It is in this context that the believers must study and resolve all issues in every age

Oneness of Allah (Tawhid) is the foundation of Islam. It affirms that Allah and Allah alone is our Creator, Sustainer, Guide and Lord; that He has no parmers; that His will and authority is supreme and encompasses the entire universe; that He is the Law Giver, and to Him we must submit and Tawhid has its corollary in the unity of His creation. It demolishes all distinctions based on race, colour, caste, lineage, wealth and power. It conduct of human affairs. It leads to the establishment of contains explicit criteria for Oneness of Allah also means the unity of life which leads to the elimination of all distinctions between the spiritual and the physical, the religious and the secular. Under this concept the whole fabric of life is governed in the secular and the secular and the whole fabric of life is governed by one law and the goal of the believers becomes the realization of the Divine will.

Ever since the beginning of creation, Allah has sent prophets who conveyed His message to mankind. Thus we have a chain of prophets beginning with Adam and ending ning with Adam and eading with Mohammed (Peace be upon them). He also revealed Books of Guidance to the Prophets Moses, David, Jesus and Mohammed (Peace be upon them). The Korse be Rook them). The Koran the Book revealed to the Prophet Mohammed (Peace be upon him), is the last and final Book of Guidance, and the Prophet Mohammed (Peace be upon him), is the last and final Prophet, after whom there will be none other. The Koran is the word of Allah, In it is preserved the Divine revelation unalloyed by interpolation of any kind. It is the essence of all the messages previously sent to mankind by Aliah. In it is embodied a framework for the judging between right and wrong and principles for the individual and collective conduct of men and women,

In it are warnings for mankind as well as a promise of guidance and support for those who seek Allah's help. The Koran presents a path—the Straight Path (Strat al mustogim)-which, when followed, revolutionizes life and leads to the establishment of an order based on truth, justice, virtue and goodness.

Man, as Allah's Khalifa, bas a pivotal role to play in this world. Islam prepares him well for this role and provides him with guidance for the development of his character and for the establishment of a just society. For purification of the self, he is required to offer prayers (Salat) five times a day. Prayers strengthen man's com-mitment to Allah, refresh his loyalty to truth and invigorate im to work for the realization of his ideals.

Prayer is supplemented by fasting (Saum) in the month of Ramadan to discipline and control his life. Alms (Zakat) commit man's worldly possessions to the achievement of the Divine purposes in the socioeconomic field.

The above are the methods by which man's body, his soul and his possessions are harnessed in the service of virtue, truth and justice. It is also truth and justice. It is also obligatory on Muslims who are able to do so to perform pil-grimage (Haji) once in their lifetime. This obligation, among other things, is an index of unity of the Muslim Ummah—a community of faith and a symbol of the unity of mankind.

created only on the basis of a universal faith and not by serving the gods of race, colour, territory or wealth. The ideal of man's brotherhood seeks and finds its realization in Islam.

Establishment of Justice on earth is one of the basic objec-tives for which Allah sent His prophets and His gaidance (The Koran, Al Hadid 57:25). All human beings have rights upon all that Allah has provided, and as such Allah's bounties are to be shared equitably. The poor and the needy have the right to share in the wealth of the nich (The Koran, Adh Dhariyat, 51:19). It is the religious duty of Muslims to harness these ources to serve the ends of justice, to promote goodness and virtue, and to eliminate evil and vice (The Koran, Al Imrun, Allah's resources must not be allowed to become instruments of oppression and exploitation by any individual or section of society or state.

It is only the mandate of Allah which confers legitimacy on governments, rulers and in-stitutions, and legitimate power and authority can be derived only in accordance with Any system of government is.

Islamic as long as it upholds the mandatory principles laid down by The Koran and As Summah: Apart from this man-datory requirement there is considerable flexibility in the form which an Islamic govern-ment may adopt. It is through this flexibility that Islam caters to the requirements of every age and place.

The objective of the Islamic

The objective of the Islamic movement is not simply to come to power by any means, but to see that the institutions of stage and society are mobilized to serve mankind by pursuing policies which further the distinctive objectives of Islam. It is, therefore, imperative that Islam's policy guidelines are spelt out and translated into practice.

The primary duties of state the primary duties of state are to establish justice in all spheres of life and to nurture and strengthen the unity of the Ummah. These objectives can only be achieved when the just expectations of people are fulfilled; and when differences in rank, power, wealth and family ties are not permitted to undermine the socio-political process of Islam.

There are no intermediaries between Allah and man. Allah's guidance is available to ail in the form of His Book, The Koran, and in the life example of His Prophet, the Sunnah. They clearly state the ideals, values and principles that man dividual and collective life on truth and justice. There exists: in this guidance a built-in mechanism to meet the demands of changing times and evolu-tion is possible within this Islam aims at creating a model society lis strategy is to mould the individual in accordance with the tenets of Islam, to organize and mobilize him within a social movement for progress and development and to establish an Islami establish an Islamic Order by building society and state; their institutions and policies, at national and inter-national levels.

The people in search of power

The British Parliament evolved to 50 words (or m to protect the people from the tyranny of kings and barons and later of landowners, ruthless employers and financial institutions. During the present century, however, the power has been eroded by the power of new functional groups, notably the mass media and the made unions.

Saily the cry of "power to the people " through revolution has brought only greater bondage under a new elite more ruthless and immovable than the barons. We most find a way to restore power to the people through Parliament. First, we need governments enjoying a majority of the popular vote through proportional represen-tation—the subject of an earlier article. Secondly, Parliament must reinforce its authority for controversial legislation by seeking democratic proof of popular support

A more practical solution than referendums would be a parliamentary public epinion poll (PPOP)—a multiple sampling of public opinion called by a majority in Parliament and organized by a judicial committee or an impartial hody such as the Electoral Reform Society, under whose super-vision three recognized polling organizations (eg Gullop, NOP, ORC) would take independent polls. Given certain important safeguards, these would provide reliable proof of public opinion. - The first safeguard would be mathematical: assuming a maximum statistical error of three per cent, the POP would be statutorily discarded as invalid unless air three polis showed a majority of double this amount 153 ner cent against 47, per (53 per cent against 47 per cent) in favour, and the average of the three showed not less than double that margin, ie 56 per cent

Perliament could (and were wise probably would) in practice usually specify a larger mergin than this—eg au average of at least 60 per cent.

The second safeguard would be the rules for presenting the case for and against the propo-sal under test. These would be based on the precedent of the 1975 EEC referendum. Each person polled would be presen-ted with an identical sheet printed by the supervisory body. On one side would be the question, in heavy type, followed by the case for voting "Yes." This would be drafted by the Government posing the question. On the reverse the Opposition would case for voting "No" including, if it wished, a comment on the question in heavy type of up maily responsible since it apparently refused an offer to take over the hostages this is not a case of a properly constituted government deliberately con-fronting the United States. It is a case of a disorganized government unwilling to act-and it is the government of a country which United States and the west need friendly relations.

As in Afghanistan there are general principles at stake as well as human lives. There are the principles of international law and diplomatic privilege, and there is the principle that international terrorism cannot be tolerated. America's allies have a general interest with the rest of the world in defending these principles and a special obligation to help an ally in trouble. But the obligation is imposed by friendship, not specifically by membership of the alliance, whose interest is the broader one that relations with Iran could be important for the future security of the west. The problem now is that this concern for the alliance is felt to be in conflict with the obligations of friendship, for President Carter is asking for action which many feel could jeopardize the long-term interests of the alliance. Yet even the obligations of friendship do not require automatic support for policies which could lead all the friends into trouble. Thus the decision for the western alliance has been not whether to belp President Carter but how best to help bim. The dilemma is genuinely difficult. There are two main arguments for increasing the pressure on Iran. One is that it imposes deserved penalties for illegal behaviour. The other is that it might stimulate the moderates in Iran to take action before the country suffers even more damage. Sanctions might enable them to argue that the price of holding the hostages was becoming too high.

The main arguments for continuing patience are that it denies the revolutionaries the confrontation they seek and is more likely to save the lives of the hostages. In other words, stiffer senctions might work but they carry the risk of playing into the hands of extremists, inflaming the situation in Iran. and endangering the bostages. Parience, on the other hand, will produce no quick results but is probably safer for the west and for the bostages. It may look weak" in American terms but it could just as well be called wise, and it is no weaker than the endless patience habitually used in dealing with hijackers and other terrorists holding hostages.

Unfortunately another consideration has now been introduced by President Carter, which is that if the alliance does not support a toughet policy his own policy will become tougher still. It is therefore obvious that the alliance will have to go some way with him if only to hang onto his coat tails. This is not a pleasing prospect but it is the lesser of two evils. Meanwhile it would help if more attention were given to Afghanistan and less to Iran.

tich comes from the Lords and reading in the Comtoday, is an important providing Scotland's justice system with eded reforms of law and are. Most of the Bill is to omed. A few clauses howive, with reason, become pject of controversy and n. They would give the 1 police unprecedentedly wers to detain and intersuspects, going considerrther than any powers. e to the police in Engd Wales, and providing safeguards for the in-1. The provision which acted particular disquiet from a wider range of critics than 18 the case when infringeof civil liberties are -would give a constable ht to detain, without g, a suspect, and to inter-im for six hours.

Sovernment's spokesmen Bill have defended thoseon the grounds that they ential to counter crime ely, and that they merely the recommendations of mmittee under Lord n which reported in ae critics point out that mson proposals carefully I the extension of police with the provision of al safeguards for the especially the tape-ig of all interrogations but that the Bill provides for the one without the other. They are naturally apprehensive that the powers might be abused, and are concerned lest the sensitive relationship between the police and the community be harmeda fear shared by some senior policemen. The police organizations had not, in fact, asked for such powers in their evidence to the Thomson committee.

It is not merely a question of whether the controversial clauses are objectionable in themselves: What is at issue is the approach of Parliament at Westminster to Scottish, legislation, Scotland has its own criminal justice system (as, indeed, it has many of its distinct laws), which differs from that of England in important respects. Traditionally, Westminster has allowed Scotland effective control over its criminal procedure, and has not interfered in areas of the law and practice in which it has been judged. rightly, that the Scots know best what is good for them.

But Westminster is still responsible for Scottish legislation. It has the duty to scrutinize proposed Scottish law to ensure that it does not offend against any basic principles of law or practice that should be uniform throughout the United Kingdom. For one thing, the European Convention on Human Rights imposes on the British government the obligation to ensure that its principles are adhered to throughout the kingdom. There is a limit even in areas of the law which convention, leaves to the discretion of the Scots, beyond which an issue ceases to be one of purely Scotmish concern but becomes one of wider, national, principle. It is arguable that the rights of persons in police detention falls into that category.

It is particularly disturbing that these significant extensions of police powers are being debated and may become law only months before the Royal Commission on Criminal Proce-dure is due to Peport. That body, of course, is limited to making recommendations about the system in England and Wales. However, the royal commission, unlike the Thomson committee, has conducted much detailed research into aspects of detention and interrogation. The lessons to be drawn from its studies would not be limited to the English experience.

It is not sensible that Parliament should be debating so highly contentious a law for one part of the United Kingdom when it will so soon have to address itself to the same issues for the rest of the country, on the basis of more reliable, comprehensive, and up-to-date information. There would be no difficulty in omitting those few clauses in the Bill which deal with police powers for future consideration, while enacting the remainder of the Bill, which is most of it, this session.

It is by no means the first time, of course, that Labour's policy-makers have understandably tried to remove the road-block of the > a different force at large in Parlia-ment and politics generally. control policy

From Sir Leonard Neal Sir, In his criticism of my letter of March 31, Sir Paul Bryan, MP, oddly asserts (April 8) that the provisions in Mr Prior's Employment Bill "are by no means lenient on secondary action". However, they are lenient enough to permit the following:

they are lenient enough to permit the following:

1. A trade union taking secondary action against major suppliers such as the gas and electricity boards— with serious national repercussions.

2. Workers picketing their own place of work in support of a erade dispute in which they are not in-volved—causing bardship to an innocent employer. nnocent employer.

innocent employer.

3. Secondary action proventing a customer from receiving his goods—causing bankrupter to a small firm thus denied the goods for which it has paid.

I accept Sir Paul Bryan's argument that Mr Prior's Employment Bill cannot and should not cover every aspect of industrial relations. Much ought to be left for subsequent legislation. But that is no argument for getting it wrong in those subjects that the Bill does deal with, for subbornly ignoring defects in his proposals when these are exposed, and for refusing to consider sensible and well argued consider sensible and well argued suggestions to remedy these.

The proposals on secondary picketing are the only part of the Bill that represent any real improvement on the existing situation. It is a pity, therefore, that they will be largely unworkable because of the unforceability. Without any assistance from the police (for there is no criminal aspect to the Billi how does an employer identify Sir Paul Bryan's "strangers at the tare" for the nurpose of obtaining infunctions against them?

I also regret that Sir Paul Bryan has so little confidence in the ordinary workers that he wishes to deny trade union members a vote on whether they wish to be on strike. This is Arthur Scarpill's view—but a strange one for a Conservative MP.

There is a simple answer to Sir Paul's point about unions being un-justly penalised in respect of their lobs because of the actions of hot-head militants beyond their control. It is that it would be a complete defence for a union to show that it had expelled them for unconstitutional action. Therefore, if a union was smeere in its opposition to unofficial action its funds would be protected.

Evidently, Sir Paul believes that only two interests in an industrial dispute are worthy of consideration: the interest of the union leaders and that of the management. I count as least six : the interest of the ordinary union members, that of the consumer, that of suppliers, of the consumer, that of suppliers, that of shareholders, that of non-unionised workers and last, but not least, the public interest. Regret-tably...Sir Paul deploys his talents in seeking to protect the first two—already protected by the TUC and CBI respectively—instead of these other interests which are not only largely unprotected bur often completely overlooked. Like Mr Prior, Sir Paul seeks to safeguard the interests of the strong at the expense of the weak. Yours faithfully LEONARD NEAL,

Looking up From Mr Robert Pettigrew

Sir. Your report in The Times (March 31) describing criticism of the conduct of expeditions mounted by the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in the annual report of the Langdale and Ambleside Mountain Rescue Team invites a response.

By the very nature of their part-time calling, members of mountain rescue teams are bound to take a rather gloomy view of the relatively few hilgoers who sustein mountain accidents—be they expert or novice. It has to be remembered that the major proportion of mountain welkers incur much less risk of accident than the average motorist.

None the less, risk is ever present in mountains and provides precisely the sort of challenge to young people that Prince Philip sought to utilize when he devised the Epeditions/Exploration section of his icheme. Few would deay that in a mere quarter century his philosophy has revolutionized the use of leisure in education bringing benefits to a host of young people which are truly incolculable.

My advice to the Langdale and Doubts about strike Reactions to 'Death of a Princess'

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From Mr Jeremy Bray, MP jor Motherwell and Wishaw (Labour) Sir, My own reaction to the ATV programme (April 9) on the Saudi Arabian princess was that it was an unusually sensitive and sympathetic programme. It was respectful to Islam, to Arab family relationships, and to the princess's grandfather in particular. It allowed Arabs of varying degrees of Islamic funda-mentalism and liberalism to state their views and to offer their interpretation of events.

It made no such barbarous assumptione, as some critics have done, that Saudi Arabia has to catch up on 500 years of history and that Arabs behave in a civilized way if they have been educated in this country. It had an Arab saying that our difficulty in Europe in understanding both the princess and her princely grandfather was that we had lost the sense of being, in our concern marchy for having in our concern merely for having.

If Saudi princes and princess actually saw the programme I think they would find it sympathetic too. Certainly, I wish an Islamic television producer would give us as sensitive a portrait of domestic tragedy in some de-mystified Western family to help us to under-stand better the tensions understand better which we live. Yours faithfully, JEREMY BRAY,

House of Commons.

From Professor Musa Mazzawi Sir, You say (April 11) that the Saudis have difficulty in understanding the "diffused responsibility for what goes out on the public broadcasting channels" in Britain, It does not seem that they do, and the statement by the Saudi authorities in London yesterday (April 11) recognizes the freedom of the media and says that the Saudis have no intention of interfering with it. What pains the Saudis and the Muslims generally is that the media in this country too easily criticize and insult things Arab and Muslim, and that they take liberties in this respect which they do not take with, say, Jews or Catholics or Frenchmen Ironically, the fact that good relations of mutual benefit exist between this country and the oil-producing Arab countries has prompted some quarters in the media here to deliberately adopt a hostile stittude just to demo-strate that they are free and independent and above material considerations.

The laws of defamation in Britain protect only individuals and not the group. The only protection which the Arabs and the Muslims have against abuse is the sense of responsibility and fairness of the responsibility and fairness of the media and of the public. The makers of this film, which has offended many people in Saudi Arabia and the Muslim world, have a duty to substentiate and justify what they put out and to answer questions. This can be done openly and fairly in contrast the service of the ser in another television programme in which those offended by the film can put their viewpoint and argue Yours faithfully,

Attitudes to Iran

From Mr Chanaka Amaratunga Sir, In the interests of truth, I feel compelled to refute some in the statements, made in the letter from Dr A. Afrooz, Charge d'Affaires of the Islamic Republic of Iran, in your issue of March 26. Dr Afrooz accuses the article by Mr Temple-Morris (January 25) of being "spiteful and contemptible", a des-cription more accurate of his own letter and the attitudes of his leader, Ayatolish Khomeini. How can rational persons be expected to recognize the noble values and humanistic goals of the Islamic Revolution" when that revolution has shown an intolerance and cruelty which I dare say has astounded much of the civilized world? The nobility and human-ism of which Dr Afrooz writes is the "nobility" of mass executions, whether they be of the Shah's generals and Iranians who were doing nothing but their duty to their monarch, or of Kurdish and other rebels trying to win a share of auto-nomy, and the "bumanism" of kangaroo court trials, ruthless lashings and other punishments. What is revolting about the Islamic republic is its hypocritical righteousness. Perhaps it is too much to ask Dr Afrooz how a regime which sanctifies the truly insane calls for blood from the Ayatollah Khalkhali can with justification complain of the excesses of Savak? I completely endorse Mr Temple-Morris's statement that "the Shah has suffered enormous and unjusti-fied vilification" and would hasten to add for Dr Afrooz's benefit that I am not a "paid spokesman" of the Shah. I do not suggest that the Shah did no wrong but it is only ridiculous fanaticism or outright dishonesty which can make Dr Afrooz and his associates oblivious of the remarkable achievements of the Shah in economic, social and educa-tional terms. Indeed much of the intellectual opposition to the Shah mtellectual opposition to the Shah was made possible by the educational reforms initiated by his father Reza Shah and by him. Dr Afroca writes of "billions of dollars despoiled" by the Shah. Has he no thought for the billions of dollars spent by the Imperial regime on projects which were of benefit to the common people and of the

From Mr Carlos Larrea La Calle Sir, Your leader on the America-Iran situation (April 9) is too long, wet and sanctimonious. In fact, it should have been the one to follow right at the onset of crisis, before the Iranians had time to organise themselves and become arrogant in respect of the American hostages crisis As for the Soviet Union fears, they are the first to interpret attempts to compromise and be cautious as signs of lear and weak ness to be taken advantage of. Some of us may be justified in thinking that the Afghan invasion is a corollary of the lack of American nerve and firmness in dealing with Iran Russia could be equal to the United States in military power these days but hopefully even they will find little solace in this fact when facing total annihilation. Lessons of Bristol riot From Mr Richard Smerdon

Although fortunate to live now in Noritto Somerset, I have worked in Bristol for over 10 years, and lived for approximately one year in a vicarage in the middle of the St Paul's area with the family of one of the priests in charge of a St Paul's

I think that what happened in St Paul's (April 2) should provoke the most serious reflection not only by the Bristol authorities, but also by this Government.

Without doubt, the riot was not racial. Race relations in Bristol are, on the whole, remarkably good, and a large number of men and women (including representatives of the police) have dedicated years of work to develop harmonious race rela-

The riot did, however, reflect an outpouring of rage and frustration by a large number of young unemployed people (most of whom are black but many white) who inevitably have nothing to do all day except frequent cafes and bars where they are easy prey to alcohol and drug trafficking. It was therefore predictable that when (with hindsight) a quite extraordinarily heavy-handed raid by police on one of these "sanctuaries" was made the indignation of a few immediate onlookers and occupants would quickly spread to a hysterical riot in a presence or hysterical further than the presence of the same than the same ntaneous outburst of fury.

The St Paul's area, like several others in Bristol, has been the vic-tim of municipal devastation as a result of motorway building. It will take years before these areas re-establish a sense of solid stability. rtunately, there is reason to believe that the local authorities now recognize the folly of the manner in which the devastation was caused and are allocating more resources as far as they can in these hard times to these deprived areas.

It is to be hoped that the riot will lead to a complete reappraisal of methods of policing in this area. However, there are at least two fundamentally important national conclusions which it is of the utmost importance for this Administration to act on before it is too late:— 1. Unemployment among youngsters (in many cases for years and years until all hope is gone) is a tragic waste of human beings. This Government appears to be contemplating with pitiless indifference the plight of the unemployed. It will cost money to promote schemes to create jobs—yes, taxpayers' money; but most of us would be willingly taxed for this objective.

2. Community relations are not just the numbers game which this Government appears to be obsessed with. It is a matter of constant, positive endeavour and appropriate resources applied by experienced and thoughtful men and women with the positive encouragement of municipal and government authorities.

Centre for industry and science From Mr Philip F. Nind Sir, One important activity with which the new Centre for Analysis of Technical Change (Catch) will have to be closely involved is not mentioned by your Science Editor in his article today (April 8). If the first problem is to close the gap between academic research and the science-based industries, the actual "mating of scientific knowledge with industry" is a man-agement task and responsibility. Therefore the centre should include not only "scientists, engineers, economists and lawyers" but also managers and management scientists. tists who are already experienced in bringing the academic and business worlds closer together and in that effective coordination of functions which is the hallmark of successful management, Techno-logical innovation within a business demands a high order of efficiency demands a high order of efficiency in production techniques, budgeting and cash flow, market research, and human relations—as Dr R. C. Parker has recently shown at Ashridge Management College.

A strong case can be made for siting Catch at one of our several universities which have a flourishing management school. But if not, nerhang is would be pertinent for rhaps it would be pertinent for its first director to be a management scientist who is familiar with the problems of coordinating research with the downstream activities of production and marketing—above all with the human problems which change inevitably entails. Nuclear arms threat From Professor Sir Joseph

Sir, When Sir Gilbert Longden (April 7) wrote that " the rulers of the Soviet Union . . . continue regardless to pile up arms and armaments far beyond those necessary for defence", did he know something that Lord Zuckerman (January 21) did not know when he wrote quoting the views of senior American scientific advisers on defence, "that any analysis of the predictions that have been reader." predictions that have been made of the Soviet military threat over the past 20 years will show that they have always been far-fetched"?

The secrecy surrounding military intelligence", weapons research, and armament manufacture makes it easy for those who are afroid of their neighbours to follow the dictates of their worst fears. That threat in itself may be thought. to betray doubts among Mr Benn's left-wing demolitionists that few existing Labour Peers could be relied on to vote for their own extinction or indeed to support the principle of a unicameral Parliament. Inquiries show the doubts are

Since the Parliament Act, 1911, not a decade has passed without some attempt to reform the House of Lords in terms of either powers or composition, or usually both; and commonly the call for change has come from the most influential Conservative Peers act-ing on the Macaulayan principle of reform that ye may preserve. Today, for instance, the leading reformers include Lord Carrington, Foreign Secretary, and Lord Hail-sham, Lord Chancellor.

reform should cause no surprise anywhere. For the virtue of an unreformed hereditary and nominated House, theoretically twice the size of the elected commons, is that it lacks popular authority to use the formidable powers it has at call on all except financial Bills, and in that knowledge is customarily willing to be biddable, compromizing or temporizing with governments of any col-

No future but beggary for a master of film

A week of Soviet films begins today at the National Film Theatre in London, Significantly absent from the season is work hy Sarkis Paradjanov-also known as Sergei Paradjanov, the Russian version of his name—an Armenian film director thought by some to be the finest Soviet film maker. He fell foul of the Soviet authorities in 1974, was sentenced to five years in a strict regime labour colony and has not been allowed to make Paradjanov, who made Shadows of Our Forgotten Ancestors and The Colour of Porgotten Ancestors and The Color of Pomegranates, was convicted of homosexuality—in fact for non-conformism—after being cleared of an unsubstantiated charge of trafficking in objets d'art. He was released after four years following an interpretainal compaign organized on his international campaign organized on his behalf. We met him in Thilisl.

Having made our way through a confusing maze of houses, we found ourselves looking up at a strange balcony. At the top of a parrow iron staircase, Paradjanov was sitting alone, motionless. He greeted us with a broad bearded smile: "Ah! you have come from France? You have come to take me away with you!".

We were shown into a small, dark and uncomfortable room. The walls were covered with engravings, paintings, photographs and pieces of embroidery. This was Paradjanov's home; he was embarrassed to be receiving us in such humble surroundings.

Paradjanov understands Armenian, but he does not speak it very well. He repeatedly asked whether we were "real" Armenians and flitted from one subject to another, referring for instance to his neighbour who could have had a success-ful career as an actress. His eyes were alert and he displayed an eloquent range of facial expressions. Our fears about his state of health were quickly dispelled. He seemed to be in perfect physical condition.

After a few minutes he got up to lead us on to the balcony. "I am not allowed to work, so I just mess about." What he had to show us was a fresco, richly coloured, made of pieces of cloth, paper and other odds and ends. It was a stylized representation of a man and woman in

I do not understand. I am an undesirable. I am a nuisance to everyone. I had already been arrested once before, in the Ukraine. I had been accused of being a Ukrainian nationalist because I had refused to dub a film in Russian, My reason for refusing was the dubbing would have debased and vulgarized the meaning of the words and distorted the effect of the images.

"On that occasion, in fact, the Ukrainians tried to use me. They claimed that I was defending their ethnic culture and l was detending their ethnic culture and language. They acclaimed me because my son attended a Ukrainian school. All my problems started at that time. The former Ukrainian president was my friend. When he was dismissed, all his friends became

"For the purposes of the prosecution I was a criminal, a thief, an anti-Soviet agitator... They even looked inside my body for gold. Then they trumped up a charge of homosexuality and that was the crime for which I was tried. I was alleged to have raped a member of the Party and to have perverted an old lady of eighty with a pornographic pen.

be enough to exterminate you."

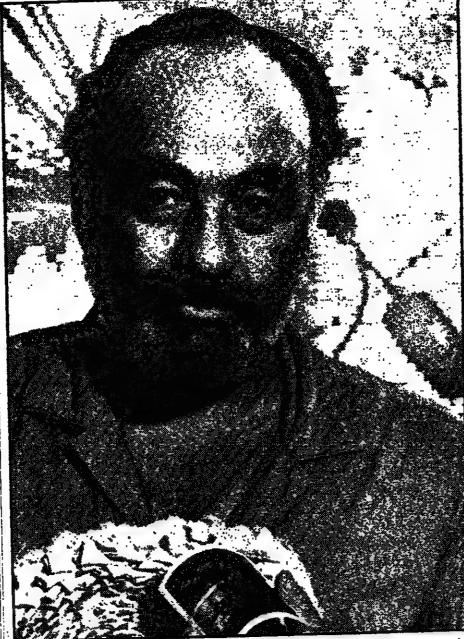

Paradjanov spoke with spirit. Very much on his mettle, he displayed a fine sense of humour, talking with complete confidence and without a hint of bitterness. He told his story quite uncomplainingly, but with a liveliness suggesting great determination. He opened his photograph album and showed us his mother, his wife and his son. Turning a page, he came to a photograph taken a page, he came to a photograph taken at the prison camp, a group of prisoners with Paradjanov surrounded by criminals.

with Paradjanov surrounded by criminals.

"They sentenced me to be detained in a labour camp. After the trial I was shunted from prison to prison because none of them wanted a 'criminal' of my sort. I was put in with murderers and missirs of all sorts. Just look at the photo: this man murdered and ste his mother; here we have a group of homo-sexuals who have dressed in women's clothes to smuse the prison warders in the hope of being given a few cigarettes.

"The years in prison were the most important time of my life so far. Isolation is an extraordinary phenomenon. I could now write a thesis on the pathological problems that it causes. My life without that experience would be no more than a mirage. Someone who is not creative, a painter, writer or artist, cau-not derive anything from such isolation, from which human sensations are shut

"I should make a study of the lear and jealousy of these men who can never get out, and write shour it. In that world I was a suspect stranger. The prisoners could squat on their baunches without moving for hours on end. I cannot keep still for a minute.

"They tried to exterminate me because I was different. They thought that I was making fun of them. In the end, though, they accepted and adopted me. I bore them a grudge for beating me up and injuring me, but I am grateful to them for helping me to discover a world.

"All the great films are as nothing compared to prison camp life. If one is a poet, one can create under these conditions." ditions. The prisoners managed to get paper for me; I wrote a hundred short stories and six screenplays. I became their confessor. They told me about their crimes, their loves, their sex lives; they would come to speak to the 'philosopher'.

"I have realized that, under certain conditions, confession as invented by religion really has a purpose and useful-ness. I could certainly make a film based on this experience, a film on man as animal. I remember one prisoner who said to me when he heard I was to be released: 'You will miss us'.

"I painted eight hundred pictures, with coal or anything that came to hand, using bits of cloth or jute. Those pictures mean a lot to me. I may be wrong, but I think they have great value. I should like them to be seen. I taught the prisoners to paint, draw and make collages. Since my release some of them have written to me; they wonder whether I have not played a dirty trick on them by teaching them the value of beauty.

"I should like my paintings to be safe. I do not want to sell them. I would prefer to give them away, to offer them to the people who have defended me, to my kriends in France or to the people who wrote 'Free Paradjanov' on the walls of

"I was made to dig and carry heavy loads. We had to work like gold daggers: I deliberately burst a sewage pipe; the smell was unbearable and we had to stop digging I almost strangled one of the warders. I was insufferable.

"One day they took pity on me and gave me lighter work. I washed sheets; I could write a novel about the life-cycle of sheets. Then I was made a floor; sweeper. One day it was announced to us that all Soviet citizens must work with zeal and fire, so I put a light bulb on my broom. I was severely punished for my

Now I am free, but I do not feel safe. I live in fear—fear of going out, fear of being burgled and fear that the paintings I did in the camp will be burnt. Here everybody has to be registered in relation to his place of work. But I am refused all employment. I have submitted screenplays. Armenfilm wanted to make the films, but the officials made objections. So I may be arrested at any time because, not being registered, I do not have the right to exist I am outside the

"Every morning I go out to look for work, along with the other misfits. When people see my diplomas they are afaid. Of course I could sell flowers, but that is not my trade. Why should I do it?

CIAL NEWS Islamic conference strives for modus vivendi with west

Religious Affairs Correspondent

The promulgation of a Univer-sal Islamic Declaration by the Islamic conference, now taking place in London, fills a gap that has long been felt in the west both by Muslims and non-Muslims.

Islam is not a religion with a central teaching authority, nor is there any universal mechanism for defining what is and what is not orthodox. The possibility of such a declaration arises only from the existence of a body like the Islamic Council of Europe, with its general acceptability in the Muslim world as both authoritative and representative. It was the Muslim diaspora in the west that called the Islamic Council into being and which also occasions the need for such a declaration of the essence of Islam. In a sense, therefore. Islam is having for the first time to operate as a religious denomination on the western pattern, within the rules of religious pluralism, but what the declaration shows is that contemporary Islam has not yet adopted its inner philosophy and self-understanding to cope

Such voices were not lacking last week, but did not pre-dominate. Rather, the tendency Wherever a substantial number of Muslims have gathered in Western Europe, brought was to want to protect Islam by making it triumphant; only in a fully Islamic state would there by economic pressures and the attractions of western in a fully islamic state would Islam be safe, hence the Islamic "norm" has to be the same as the Islamic "ideal", a society based on rigorous application of prosperity, the peculiar in-compatibilties of the faith of Islam with western secular industrialized democracy have been sharply experienced.

As many speakers at the first conference confirmed, Islam is under great pressure because of the Koran.

That is not, obviously, much help to western Muslim minorities, unless the prospect of some distant, almost eschatounder great pressure because of that experience. The tradi-tional Muslim way of life can casily be undermined unless scrupulously protected. Young Muslims, particularly the new generations born in Western Europe, have tended to become lax in their faith or in give it un altogether, and logical promised land might serve as a consolation in facing short-term practical difficulties. The danger there is that it might spiritualize the message of Islam, turning it into a remote dream. The next step could be to abandon it altogether as having no prac-tical consequences. The current mood of Islam is western woys at bay.

The universal declaration will be more useful to the latter than to the former. It not well suited to the pursuit of the other possibility, adapta-tion as a safeguard against as-

Islam rather than adapting it. claration itself, for instance, says little about how a Muslim can adjust to being a member of a riny minority while also a full participant in the com-munity. It seems that in many important areas of life he would have to withdraw altogether.

It is that feeling, no doubt, that explains the arrection to British Muslims of the idea of a separate set of laws, part of British statute law but applicable only to Muslims, to cover such matters as family life, education, and worship. It would create a little bit of an Islamic state within British society,

That is not, however, compatible with the deep British instinct for the relationship between law and culture, and such a claim for special status is bound to fail. And it would be wrong for Muslims to treat that as deliberate discrimina-tion; it is more a mismatch of basic political philosophies.

What European society and culture have to reply to the explicit or implicit Muslim claims is that those belief systems that thrave in a pluralistic world are those that can adapt themselves to make pluralism an advantage rather of the game have to be accepted

For Muslims, however, that will not be easy. The spirit of the Koran, at least as traditionally interpreted, is the very antithesis of pluralism.

That is not to say that it is necessarily intolerant of non-Muslim minorities in the midst of a Muslim majority; Islam's record is good, better in fact than Christianity's in those circumstances. It is to say, however, that the tendency towards Muslim fundamentalism, as at present, is not the most helpful for Muslims in the west, whatever its benefits in the tradi-tionally Muslim world.

If the publication of a universal Islamic declaration can bring that issue more sharply into focus, the gradual and necessary process of mutual adjustment may yet begin. The west, too, would certainly of Islam are of universal validity.

The Muslim minority in Europe is a potential asset and source of enrichment, which it would be a tragedy to see wasted by incomprehension or prejudice.

Entomology: A sex life built on pine

By the Staff of Nature

Such a close relationship has evolved between some insects and evolved between some insects and the plants on which they feed that the sex life of one depends on the availability of the other. A group of scientists in the United States has shown that certain bank beetles require a chemical compound, found in a pine tree, before they can produce their own equivalent of an aphrodisiac, enabling males to attract females.

mologists have shown great interest in the innimate relations between insects and their host plants, not only for what this can tell them about the process of evolution, but also because the insects can wreak havoc when something goes wrong with the relationship and they become prolific. The various species of bark beetle, which are serious pests in several particular attention.

beetles could produce two of their pheromones when in the presence of a supply of a compound called myrcene. That compound called myrcene. That compound was also known to be available in the pondeross pine, and so Dr Hendry and his colleagues looked for evidence that myrcene could be converted directly into the pheromones inside the insect's body.

They prepared radioactive myrcene and sealed it in small tubes with several male bark beetles. After 18 hours, sufficient time for the beetles to have made some of their pheromones, they were removed and their bodies were chemically analysed.

The radioactivity was now found in the compounds corresponding to the pheromones, showing that Any knowledge gained about pheromones also has practical value. Several species of insect, pest are being controlled by the use of pheromones, either to bait traps or to confuse tefnales so that they cannot find males to mate with them.

Miles scores first win in London chess contest

By Harry Golombek
Chess Correspondent
There was much spirited play in the fourth round of the Philips and Drew Kings Grandmaster Tournament at County Hall, London yesterday.

The game with the most dramatic course was between the Hungarian grandmaster, Gyula Sax, and the Yugoslav grandmaster Ljubojevic. Sax adopted a rather artificial setup in the opening, enabling his opponent to embark on a flerce sacrificial attack ending with the white king exposed to its enemies. Sax resigned after only 18 moves.

Tony Miles, the British grandmaster, scored his first win by a typically powerful and enduring counter-attack as black against the young Oxford University mathematics lecturer and grandmaster John Nunn. Gheorghin drew a been growing and last month riors led to the banning of the opposition Progressive People's Party, and to arrests of some of its members.

Tolbert succeeded to office in 1971 on the death of President W. V. Tubman, on the American pattern, as he had been Vice-President for 20 years. He vice-trestoent for 20 years. He had been intimately connected with the later Tubman policies of modernization, and the integration of the True Whig families, descendants of the freed slaves who founded the country in 1847 and the indigenous wars. in 1847, and the indigenous west African tribesfolk, hitherto kept in an inferior status. He regarded himself as a reforming President, and made many promises, such as the introduction of one-man onevote elections, free college edu-cation, and free medical care for children. He also promised not to continue in office for life, as his predecessor had done, and would have stood down in 1984—unless he had found it convenient to delay this promise, as he had so many others,

Though Toibert helped to close the long-standing social gap, the guif between rich and poor remained, as did allegations of ministerial corruption. In 1974 this led to a cabinet reshuffle, but the changes made did not satisfy public opinion. William Tolbert was a wealthy man, as was the rest of his family.

In foreign affairs Tolbert also continued the policies of his predecessor, who had helped to make the "Monrovia Group" of African new nations a balancing factor to the "Casablanca Group", which was militant, left-leaning, and at first much under the influence of President under arrest.

Report points to bad haulage management

Transport Correspondent

Road hauliers are suffering from lack of financial control, especially in collecting pay-ment from customers, according to a new study out today.

The report, by Inter Com-pany Comparisons, is a survey of 99 bauliers. It comments that competent management is scarce in the haulage industry.

Many hauliers allow 70 days for payment, more than double the time set by most credit controllers.

"Hauliers seem to have a tradition of not pressing cus-tomers for payment, just as manufacturers are loath ever to settle a transport account," the

Although many other com-panies are equally lax, often for fear of losing a regular customer, hauliers must be hit particularly badly in days of high interest rates by their generosity when so many of their own outgoings are

The survey shows that independent haulage companies perform better than subsidiaries of large groups. ICC attributes this partly to a tendency of the conglomerates to acquire costly overheads, and partly because of the likelihood of financial support from the parent company if the haulier ran into difficulties.

Independents showed average return on capital last year of 24.6 per cent compared with 13,2 per cent for subsidiaries. Average profit per employee was £1,233 for independents and £61 for subsidiaries. Independents also paid their employees more—an average of £4,041 compared with £3,887.

By Kenneth Owen Technology Editor A last-minute attempt to prevent the Civil Aviation Authority placing an Civil Aviation Authority placing an order for air traffic control radar systems worth more than £20m with an overseas supplier is being made by the General Electric Company, trade unions and Members of Parliament.

This follows the rejection by the authority of a joint bid for the contract from GEC-Marconi and Plessey Radar.

The authority said yesterday that no decision had yet been taken on the choice of supplier, but a GEC/Plessey choice of supplier, but a GEC/Plessey source confirmed that the two companies had been informed in writing that their joint bid had been rejected.

The annuacement of the contract award has been expected since January.

ast-minute efforts by GEC to prevent the order going abroad are believed to include an attempt to submit a further bid, this time without Plessey involve-Last January Mr Frank Chorley, managing director of Plessey Electronic Systems (which includes the radar company), said it seemed likely the authority's order would go to the reported that the Dutch company Signaal, a member of the Philips group, has become the favoured choice. The decision by the Civil Aviation Authority to go to international tender was taken last year, after separate bids by Plessey and by GEC-Marconi had been judged unacceptable.

The main requirement is for radar equipment to handle the en-route control of civil aircraft in eastern and south-eastern England. Control in the airport areas is also included.

Mr Chorley said in January the over-all requirement that the same difficults are all requirement that the same difficults are the same difficults.

all requirement was a very difficult one all requirement was a very difficult one to meet. It appeared that Westinghouse (and now presumably Signaal) had an off-the-shelf system which even if it did not meet the complete specification was at least available, while the design proposed by the two British companies would need further development.

The British proposal, also, was apparently more expensive than the competing bids.

Mr Chorley had areued that there

Mr Chorley had argued that there was a danger that the orders might be placed with foreign companies which would offer the cheapest immediate solution, but which would damage the credibility of United Kingdom panies in export markets generally.

In the case of the authority's order, he said, a possible immediate advantage to the authority of perhaps £2m would put at risk overseas orders worth £200m a year for Plessey and GEC-Marconi in

At least two unions—the Amalgamsed Union of Engineering Workers (Technical, Administrative and Supervisory Staffs section) and the Electrical Electronic, Telecommunication and Plumbing Union—have in recent weeks urged the Government to bear in mind the interests of the British companies. Members of Parliament sponsored by the EETPU will be trying to introduce an early-day motion deploring the atti-tude of the authority now that the Commons has resumed after the Easter

Though Mr Chorley and other Plessey directors were arguing strongly for the CEC Plessey solution while it was still a contender, the Plessey view now is that the decision by the authority to reject this solution must be accepted. The company says it is very disap-

Since the bidding is now subject to the open-tendering rules of Nato, the danger, as seen by the British companies, is that if this first station were to go to a foreign company the prospects for United Kingdom firms in later bidding would be jeopardized.

Fall in new public housing forecast

By Patricia Tisdall

Management Correspondent A 25 per cent drop in new public sector construction work by 1981 is the forecast made by the National Council of Building Material Producers today. The biggest drop is expected to be in public housing where the forecast levels of starts at 50,000 in 1980 and 55,000 in 1981 are the lowest levels since the last war.

Decreases are also expected in non-housing public sector construction work because of the shortage of finance, and in the case of nationalized indus-ries, the difficulties in meeting tough targets for borrowing.

The report which has been compiled by the forecasting panel of the council, considers that private housebuilding is likely to suffer in the about

The panel believes that there will be a strong underlying demand for homes arising from the changing atructure of the population. This will create merket and other pressures for increasing the total number of homes being built over the next few years.

number of housing starts for 1980 is 185,000 and 200,000 in the following year. Of this, it expects 125,000 and 145,000 being in the private sector.

Industrial building is ex-pected to suffer setbacks in the next two years. The tax changes announced in the Budget, which increased initial allowances on small factories and the proposed enterprise 200es, were welcomed as a useful stimulus. However, their full impact is not thought to be felt by the construction industry until after 1981. The forecast is that industrial building output would fall by 5 per cent in 1980 and a further 10 per cent in 1981.

A somewhat more stable out-look was envisaged for private commercial construction work. The panel felt that the rising trend experienced during the last three years was sufficient given enough work "in the pipeline" to achieve some stability despite a recent decime in new orders. There was in addition considerable new investment coming from insurance companies and pension fund operators. As a result it forecasts only small decreases in this sector of 1 per cent in 1980 and 3 per cent for 1981.

Seagram's of Canada has signed a letter of intent with the Sun company of Penusylvania to sell all of its United States oil and gas interests for $2.300m (£1,100m). In addition to this purchase price Sun says it is willing to make up to $400m in capital expenditure commitment on these Seagram

The likelihood of a prolonged government crisis in Belgium comes at a time when the country's economic prospects are worse than at any point since the recession of 1975.

Last week's resignation of the government of Mr Wilfried Martens coincided with a spate of reports about the economy that have been almost wholly bad.

The most dramatic came this weekend from the finance ministry. According to provisional figures Belgium's current account balance of payments deficit widened to 111,600m francs (about £1,665m)

These figures, which were far worse than recent forecasts had suggested, followed a warning from the economic ministry the day before that the present high

Western central bankers will tunity to discuss last week's sharp decline in the value of the dollar on foreign exchange markets.

The central bank governors will have another opportunity to

Engineering contractors criticize Finniston By Edward Townsend

Britain's Federation of Civil Engineering Contractors bas become the latest organization to criticize what it sees as the sweeping recommendations of the Finniston report on the engineering profession.

Like other engineering bodies, the federation has welcomed the attention focused by the report on the current plight of United Kingdom engineering. But it also rejects Finniston's basic premise that the recommendation for a new engineering authority must apply to engineering as a whole. Inclusion of civil engineer-ing, says the federation in a statement today, cannot be jus-tified as enhancing the education, training and status of civil egineers. "In the long term it could in fact weaken the international standing of the industry."

The federation's reaction to Finniston, which it stresses is not a "complete critique" of the report, follows last week's expected attack from the Council of Battack from cil of Engineering Institutions. The federation said it welcomed the proposal for an en-gineering authority to promote in manufacturing industry but was concerned that there was almost no reference to civil engineering in the report. This was "regrettably negli-gent" when such sweeping recommendations were put forward, since a comparison between civil engineering and manufacturing would show that in certain key areas the two were in completely opposite These were: the status of engineers in employing organ-izations; production as a route to the top for engineers; the value placed by employers on postgraduate training; and the attitude of employers to civil engineering qualifications. Civil engineers were already found on company boards and at all levels throughout manage-ment in civil engineering com-panies. Postgraduate training was already formalized through was an easy to manked through the Institution of Civil Engin-eers and the importance of fur-ther qualifications was recog-nized by employers in the industry.

The federation said it would be "extremely counter produc-tive, not just for our industry but for the United Kingdom as a whole, for any action to be taken which would jeopardize the special position of civil engineers".

A third Gatwick-based airline, British Caledoniau, withdrew its application for a Miami route licence because it will be opening a low profile until they determine whether last week's "Death of a Princess" television programme has any serious lasting effect on British

It was an unexpected blow to companies already suffering the consequences of developments in the Soviet Union and Iran. Saudi Arabia will be annonuncing its £125,000m development plan for 1980-85 soon and Britain was expected to have a good opportunity to Increase exports.

Total exports to the Soviet Inion, Iran and Saudi Arabia last year were worth more than £1,500m. Sales to the Russians fell in 1979 to £419m, a slight drop in value terms from the previous year's £423m but a serious decrease in real terms. Exports to Iran fell by £500m to £232m.

Soviet purchases are largely geared to big project contracts and Russia has already shown its displessure over the strong Anglo-American stance Afghanistan by awarding the first in a series of large contracts to the French. Wimpey. BP and Brown &

Root formed an Anglo-American consortium that looked certain to win a $118m (£55m) order for a complex to build offshore drilling rigs, having proved their technology in the tough conditions of the North Sea's Forties field. The French technology was almost untried; the French are expected now to get more orders in a programme which will be worth $24,000m (£11,000m), over the next 10 If Britain accepts President Carter's deadline for sanctions against Iran, another long-stand-ing British contract would almost certainly be lost : supplying car kits of the old Hillman Hunter model, used largely in Iran and assembled locally. Trade with Saudi Arabia is more complex, and is satisfied by work in thousands of factories. It was worth £894m last year, increasing by 14 per cent on the previous year, but Britain has not wan many contracts in valuable big construction work. Arabia's development plan between 1980 and 1985 will be announced shortly and the $270,000m (£125,000m) to be spent should have given British exporters a big opportunity to increase sales. British exports to Saudi Arabia fall into five categories, led by machinery and transport (£135m), miscelleneous manufactured goods (£98m), chemicals (£80m), and food (£45m).

With the emphasis under the new five-year plan expected to switch to fornishing recently completed plant, British com-panies were confident of much

The sales manager of one company, employing just 35 people, said yesterday: "We are expecting to do about £1m worth of business in Saudi Arabia this year, and we can only hope that the whole thing blows over very quickly." Another British company, with a representative office in Riyadh, said: "We have told our people to keep a fairly low profile, and we expect to be ble to judge the mood of the Saudi Arabians in the next week next week or so." .

The view of industry generally is that the makers of telefiction-documentaries should weigh the consequences more carefully, because they do not have to return to countries in which exporters have to have a constant presence.

MANAGEMENT

Keeping all the live wires together

Eurotherm International. o Worthing in Sussex, is the sort of enterprise that one might have expected to fail. Set up 15 years ago by four scientists who knew a lot about doing their own thing but little about management and nothing about money, the group not merely survived, but succeeded in becoming a world leader in industrial electronics.

The four men were Mr Jim Hartnett (chairman), Doctor Jack Leonard (managing director), Mr Mike Somervill and Mr Gerry Martin. The first three still dominate the group and reckon that they have something to teach British

They have, however, advantages not possessed by other concerns. Eurotherm manufactures nothing, sells nothing, has never had a strike and decentralizes with an ease Sir Arnold Weinstock, head of Arnold Weinstock, head of GEC, might envy. The group designs, assembles and services instruments and instrument ranges made from other people's components. Its managers know the precise requirements of customers around the world and send out only equipment made to order.

The group gets on with its work without trade unions, who have repeatedly failed to gain a toehold. According to Mr. G. A. Withrington, one of the directors, "even Clive Jenkins, no mean recruiter, failed to set up a cadre of ASTMS here". Eurotherm expands through

On the back of the Post Office's Prestel viewdata service, which links telephone and television to provide a fast, easy method of retrieving information, a new way of supplying internal business information has been developed. The public Prestel service is in In keeping with this concept, the Seventh Directive will for itself a valuable resource for husiness people, as the Post Office is now proclaiming, but all practical purposes force each economic power block operating within the EEC to it hat also opened the way to a new world of private viewdata esent a consolidated picture of its economic position, irrespective of whether it is headed Viewdata systems in general (and Prestel in particular) store "pages" of information in computer memories. The user calls up the required pages via the telephone, and the pages are displayed on the screen of a television set or business viewdata terminal. In domestic Prestel sets calling up is done by means of a remote-control keyped.

From the beginning the restel system was designed to be easy to use—by families at home and business people at

In general the private viewdata systems that are now becoming available are able to use the public Prestel service s well as to satisfy the user's n-house need. The same procedures are used for both the public and the private parts of

We welcomed the formetion of the ACARD/ABRC/Royel Society Biotechnology Joint Working Party as reflecting in timely concern with the potential of biotechnology and the opportunities it offers for industrial innovation. We strongly support the report of the working party recently pub-lished and look forward to the fullest implementation of its ecommendations. The report foreshadows a coordinated policy for British biotechnology not only between the research councils but also between the appropriate Gov-ernment departments. Such co-ordination is essential because of the multidisciplinary struc-ture of biotechnology, and the need to bridge the gaps between research, development and production.

One of our major concerns is the provision of adequately trained manpower to sustain. Luture progress. A key recommendation of the working party provides for the required teaching and research staff and we trust that the University Grants Committee will respond to this urgent call. The constitution recommended involves a relatively small por-good. There are two areas to it of the shareholders (includ-surance, which has a 3.3 per the company) should be directing their attention: the ownership of Assam, should the acquisition go through, and the price that is to be paid.

As to the former, following the acquisitions Broadland and its associates (ie the Guthries) will earn 64.8 per cent of the voting capital. The company has already been reclassified as a close company and presumably on the argument that Guthrie interests have control already, the Takeover Panel is not imposing the requirement for a general offer under Rule 34 of the City

The second question—that of the price to be paid for Learmonth and County-is the more important and the more complicated. Apart from a payment of £130,000 in cash for County's convertible participating pre-ference shares, it is to be satisfied by the issue of shares in Assam.

Now, while Learmonth (which is involved in investing in and developing property in Scotland and the north of England) is being acquired at net asset value of £1.88m (after allowing for contingent capital gains liabili-ties and adding in profits for the year to end March, 1980); considerably more than net asset value is being paid for County. Including the £130,000 in cash being paid for the preference shares, the total amounts to £467,500 against asset value of £191,000.

Of course, the effects are reflected in net asset value. Allowing for the holdings in McLeod Russel at directors' valuation (£3.23m, equivalent to market value at end-March, 1976, plus subsequent additions at cost plus Assam's share of retained profits), net asset value would improve from 47.9p to 51.2p on the acquisitions. But Assam's stake in McLeod Russel was worth £5.55m in the market, on the date that the property acquisitions were announced: and allowing for that valuation, net asset value would fall from 86.4p per Assam share to 75.1p following the acquisitions.

It is by no means unusual for public companies to issue shares at a market price well below net asset value, but then few public companies hold their assets in a form so readily realizable as this clutch of McLeod Russel shares. Nor is it unusual for public companies to issue their shares to shareholders at a hefty discount to net asset value in the hope of earnings to come—it happens on every rights issue.

But then, the shares issued by most companies by way of rights are available to all shareholders on the same terms, whether or not they choose to take them up. Those to be issued by Assam for Learmonth (and County) will be available only to those shareholders who have an interest in those Diversification may be desirable: but shareholders ought to inquire whether this is the way to set about it.

Amstrad

Not quite like anything else

The offer-for-sale price of 85p for shares in Amstrad Consumer Electronics looks fairly pricey. On the forecast 43 per cent rise in pre-tax profits to £1.3m in the year to June 30 the prospective fully-taxed p/e is 12.7 and the shares are being offered by Kleinwort Benson on a yield of 5.5 per cent.

The hi-fi market is fiercely competitive and fashions change fast. This year promises to be a very tough one and given the present condition of the stockmarket, Amstrad must clearly have something special to offer to warrant this kind of rating.

The marketing skills are those of founder, chairman and controlling sharsholder, Mr Alan Sugar. Flexible production methods involving a combination of own manufacture, sub-contracting and imports from the Far East help Amstrad to undercut the com-

Amstrad has no debt, despite its rapid growth which has seen sales rising by nearly half to £5.6m in the two years to June, 1979, and then run out at £4.8m in the following six months.

So despite the demanding rating, and barring a stockmarket collapse, the shares could well open at a premium when dealings start. But how long Amstrad can maintain its growth and keep a step ahead in such a volatile industry is a question to be borne in

US banking comes out of the 'dark ages'

America's banks lead the world in sophistication in interna-tional business, but domestically the industry could be said to be still in the dark ages.

Now, far-reaching changes are at last taking place. They should make the biggest United States banks even more competitive banks even more competitive

They should also extend the al banks.

From the viewpoint of control of the money supply this last provision is critical. Many smaller American commercial banks have been able to withdraw from membership of the Federal Reserve system and come fully under the control of state banking authorities. By doing this they may suffer from being less able to obtain all the central bank's services, but they need not place interest free deposits at the central bank in line with Federal Reserve re-

The Fed has increasingly sought to improve its control over bank reserves in its efforts to restrict growth of the money stock, but, as the Reserve re-quirements have been in-creased, so increasing numbers of commercial banks have withdrawn from the Fed's system. With the growth of withdrawals the central bank's ability to control increases in bank reserves has declined.

Improvement

The new law now gives the Fed the power to impose re-serve requirements on all de-pository institutions for all ordinary accounts and for all time deposits. Now every bank in America is brought under the Fed's umbrella.

This more, as Mr William Miller, the Secretary of the Treasury, has accurately noted, "establishes for the first time in our history a central bank for establishes for the first time

The Fed for the first time will have to issue a specific price list for all banks for. its assorted services.

The United States has some 14,500 commercial banks and 4,400 savings and loans justitutions. The differences between these financial organizations have declined over the years, as the building societies have sought to find holes in the laws that enable them to offer cus-tomers current accounts and cheque books and as the com-mercial banks have moved more and more into the mortgage The commercial banks and thrift institutions have both suffered severely from high inflation, as customers have turned to money-market mutual funds and other means to obtain rates on their savings more in line with the level of inflation. The problem has been that the law has set stiff ceilings on what banks can pay depositors. what banks can pay depositors.

The maximum rates, depending on the length of time deposits, has ranged from about 5 to 7 per cent at commercial banks, with the building societies being able to offer a quarter of these financial institutions can pay on deposits. Further, the law allows the savings institutions for the first time to offer lines of credit, remote service, units, consumer loans of all credit cards and unmortgages.

Umil now the banks and building societies have been onable to compete in terms of services, so they have resorted to all the devices of modern to all the devices of modern-advertising and marketing to attract depositors. The visitor to the United States is often sur-prised to read—or see on television—advertisements pro-claiming that banks and thrift institutions are offering splen-did free gifts for new clients.

State laws

Some banks offer free china, radios and relevision sets. One New York bank offered a Rolls-Royce in exchange for a large long-term deposit. A Washing-ton bank is striving to win deposits by offering silver goblets and another by awarding gold coins.

In time, thanks to the phasing our of deposit ceilings, this absurd system of gifts will give way to sensible competition in rates and services. President Carter has said that he believes that this will help to reduce banking prices to customers and so serve the anti-inflation

In line with the abandonment of fixed rate ceilings in an age of double-figure infla-tion, the new law abolishes the

The new law also contains a ... number of other notable pro visions, including one that pre-vents foreign banks for the next three months from acquiring any more major United States institutions. American savers are also to have their deposition banks and savings institutions insured by the government up, to $100,000 (the limit used to be $40,000) and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency is given enhanced power to super-vise the competence of banks.

Laws still remain, however;... which prevent commercial banks from opening branches in more than one of the 50 American states (foreign banks were exempted from this rule until another major banking law reform, the International Banking Act of 1978). Bank of Manual America is still restricted, in the United States, to retail activities in California, just as Citibank is limited to New York

But the Fed has moved some way in recent years to widening the scope for banks to develop national wholesale banking office networks and increasingly. seems to be a matter of time efore national retail banking is allowed. Such a move would, of course, increase still further degree of bank competition in the United States and now. thanks to the new law, an era of intensified competition is

Stone-Platt: how the Bank came to play its part technical on a bank loan which precipi-tated the recent financial crisis at Stone-Platt Industries was given en added dimension by he involvement of the Bank of

As so often in the past when the Bank has involved itself in industrial problems, its role has been low key and carried out with the minimum of publicity. Traditionally the Bank has been reluctant to comment on its part in such matters. Stone-Platt itself will not even say whether the Bank was involved.

The problems Stone-Platt faced, elthough technical, still demanded an urgent solution, which is why the Bank came to which is why the bank came to play a part. One of Stone-Platt's loans from Grindlays Benk contained a net worth covenant, stipulating that the group's net assets should not fall below a certain level.

Reserves

drawal from reserves relating to grading losses and closure reorganization costs incurred in 1979, this covenant was breached. This in turn triggered off cross-default clauses with the other banks with the result that £30m of unsecured United Kingdom debt became immediately repayable on demand.

Had the problem been spot-ted in time, Stone-Platt might well have been able to restruc-ture its debt in an orderly fashion, without the problem ever coming to light in the way is did. way it did.

Sir Jasper Hollom, former deputy governor of the Bank, played the role of arbitrator in the negotiations with the various parties, thus helping to any or a heavy ending to a ensure a happy ending to a problem which could theoretically have put Stone Platt into serious financial difficulties. The Bank clearly sees its involvement in the rescue as a fairly distant one and it has probably carried out similar operations in the past without its role ever coming to light. The Benk's presence should be seen in the context of its past and continuing industrial role which has evolved with the development of its Industrial Finance Unit. As expressed in the Bank's last annual report, it sees this role as one of keeping in touch through its network of contacts with the problems and prospects of industry. Its last sunual report said: "Particular and prospects of industry. Its last sunual report said: "Particular and and an angle of the problems and probl ular efforts are made to ensure of developments likely to have an adverse effect on company finances as a whole."

Besides this general monitor-ing role, the Bank has in the past become involved in the problems of particular sectors or companies. It assisted in rationalizing the baking in-dustry and in sorting out the problems of Spillers.

When J. Lyons ran into problems with its overseas bor-rowings because of the sharp fall in sterling some years ago, the Bank was hovering quietly in the background. Like many other industrial companies, Stone-Plant has suf-fered from a strong pound, high interest rates and poor demand. It has also run into problems which are unique to

The company decided that it had to concentrate its operations on two of these factories, and Oldham became the vulnerable centre.

"The Association's total new annual premium income for 1979 was $22.08m. against £19.53m in 1978; an increase of 13%. There was a conspicuous increase in individual pension sales and the self employed contract sold well in contract to the general market irend."

"We continued to support this sales effort with limited advertising to selected. markets and this has helped to get. "The Provident Mutual" across to intermediaries and the public. Another book was published The Well Stocked Granary' aimed at the self employed and "The Triple Option Pension Plan' was launched which provides wide investment options to suit personal needs. These activities attracted favourable comment and helped to keep the Association in the public eye as a progressive life office."

"After taking into account changes in the value of assets, total funds at the end of the year increased by 274m in the year. to £434.5m,"

"Voluntary contributions by pension scheme members were increasingly seen as the short term answer to the problems raised by the erosion in value of preserved pensions after job changes. The Association, is now offering contracts of this type to existing pension scheme policyholders and the market generally. The initial reaction has been favourable, although we shall have to wait until 1980 to see these efforts converted into additional business."

Investment The abolition of exchange controls and the disappearance of the dollar premium create new opportunities for portfolio diversification within the usual constraints imposed by the necessity to meet contractual obligations. The current strength of sterling provides an opportunity to buy selected overseas investments at historically cheap prices un sterling terms and we expect to take advantage of the situation. I have no doubt that we can do this without forgoing any worthwhile investment opportunity in

"In 1979 our support for the UK government's borrowing needs was once again the predominant area of investment: in total 249.3m was invested in British Government Stocks. We maintained our investment in equity stocks at a similar level to recent years, investing 29,7m of which only £1.8m was overseas?

General The present government has stated that it prefers self regulation to new legislation. This is to be applauded and it is now up to the insurance industry to scrutinise its practices objectively, amend them if appropriate and defend them strongly if necessary. In a society where the consumer lobby is increasingly vocal it is important that misrepresentation and misunderstandings are quickly corrected."

"Once again the management and staff have worked with complete commitment in the interests of policyholders and I take this opportunity to thank them for their splendid efforts during the year."

Silk became a common coun-cilman of the Corporation in 1974 and soon made it known that he planned to stand for alderman. This anachronistic position, which within the City dates back to 1249 when one.
Alexander le Serrun was elected to represent Walbrooke ward, was banished in 1974 by local government reorganization everywhere in England except the City. The Corpora-tion was spared because, unlike conventional local authoriries, it had elected aldermen.
This decision by the Government highlights one of the common misapprehensions about the Corporation—that it is in some way comparable with a democratically-run local authority. In fact, the Corporazion, while not quite a rotten borough, operates very much on the basis of a gentleman's agreement. Silk is as aware of this as anyone, as he showed by informally approaching a senior alderman and inquiring about his chances of joining this select group, as is the cus-

This may not seem particularly fashionable in the 1980s, but it is indisputably the way in which this arcane 800-year-old system of government operates. Despite the gossip surrounding Silk, it is likely that he will not become a City alderman for the most boring of reasons. Other good, intelligent men have tried before and failed to convince the Corporation that they are the right sort to join the club.

Insurance in the spotlight

W. Greenwell & Co have taken a long look at insurance brokers, a sector currently dominated by the bid from American giant Marsh and McLennan for C. T. Bowring.

In the first of a series of regular commentaries on the sector, Messrs Keith Brown and Nicholas Baulch point out that the bid is likely to lead to an acrimonious battle, if it is not frustrated by any regulatory authorities in the United States. They add that the consequences could reverberate through the whole industry.

On the trading environment the analysts find hile evidence that market conditions are improving. The last quarter of 1979 saw some improvement in rates, but this was not followed through into 1980.

Exchange rates will help pro fits for the rest of the year, but deckning interest rates may hit interest income. So it is the defensive stocks that rate recommendations. C. E. Heath

Finally, Stenbouse and Willis Faber are included in the list, though the latter may be looking a little expensive lately after some substantial investment interest.

Boots is the subject of a major review from Rowe & Pitman, and the brokers rate the company a buy. They expect profits to rise from E113m to £124m this year and to £141m in 1981 taking earnings per share up to 18.5p.
The brokers argue that the decline in retail margins that came after the boom conditions of the mid-1970s was weathered by Boots and it managed to gradually raise profits in the period. As a result, it is now trading off lower margins and coping successfully with the intense competitive environment of the

Why Anglo took a stake in Cons Gold

New light has been shed on Anglo's reasons for the dramatic purchase of 25 per cent in Consolidated Gold Fields. Mr Nicholas Oppenheimer said that when mystery buying of the shares started last year, Anglo was concerned that a foreign company, for example as American oil major, might gain control of Cons Gold, and through it gold fields of South

The fear was not nationalist, or an excuse for bringing control of what may become South Africa's largest gold mine back home. Rather, it was to preserve the integrity of South African gold mining as corrently constituted. "We didn't want a maverick loose in the on appointing another Angle director to the Cons Gold board, Mr Oppenheimer could not say when someone would be named.

He dismissed speculation, widespread in Britain, that the purchase was to block General Mining. That, he said, was a story started by the papers. The trigger had been market talk of share buying, though he said he still did not know if anyone had been

New York, April 13 Trading was sluggish on the New York Stock Exchange last

New York Stock Exchange last week, but at least it was positive and the Dow Jones Industrial lindex edged upwards, to close 7.42 points to the good at 791.55. The simple yardstick, in fact, understates the strength of the market. A gloomy weekend press got things off to a bad start on Monday, unnerving dealers and causing a near-16 point tumble in prices. But bargain hunting, particularly on Wednesday, more than made up the losses.

rbe losses. Trading was always slow, with volume rarely above 35m—well under half the record. And this reflected the mood, which was one of caucion after the shake-out, mingled with hope that the arrival of the 20 per cent prime interest rate does finally mean that the cost of money will shortly begin to fall. One of the smaller banks, UMB Bank and Trust, did clip its rate by 1 to 194 on Wednesday.

The Wall Street and Canadian stock prices given in the table relate to Friday's close. Later publication is caused by the change to British Summer Time. This will continue until Eastern Daylight Time begins in the United States.

On Friday, after the market had closed, the Federal Reserve Board, monitoring the fight against inflation, announced that growth in the money supply had been flat for a further week. This could give a further boost to investors' conflictors. confidence.

The shares, which did well were those which stand to profit from a fall in interest rates. The savings and loan banks the equivalent of building societies — found buyers for the first time in months. So too did the utilities, the electric and telephone companies. It is now apparent that since March 24, when short-term interest rates peaked", the utilities have shown steady gains, simply be-and remained so throughout its full length. As a short-term solution to conditions, some owners are arranging limited-period charters, for say, 3/6 months, nor wanting to compite themselves too far about in months, nor wanting to commit themselves too far ahead in case the market improves. Others are slow steaming tan-kers around the Cape or hold-ing tonnage in the Mediter-ranean rather than ordering it through Suez to the Gulf where the amount of pomage still

A warning from Unctad follows the collapse of the cocoa pact

Agreement dealt a serious blow to Unctad's commodity stabilization scheme, Mr Gamani Corea, secretary-general of Unctad. has given a warning that failure to resolve outstanding issues holding up agreement on a new $750m fund to finance international commodity pacts could have serious consequences for relations between rich and poor states.

He was speaking in Geneva at the opening of a two-week session of a 100-nation committee drafting texts of treaty articles setting up the fund.

"If at this fifth session expectations of progress are not fulfilled, then I feel that there would be very serious lessons that could be learned about the whole process of bringing about changes in the international economic framework through a system of negotiations between member governments in a cooperative way", he said. Successful completion of. negotiations on the fund next month would help to set the stage for a special session of the United Nations General Assembly in New York next September on north-south economic relations, and global discussions which are to follow.

But if differences over the fund remained unresolved, there was a danger these would become interwoven with other negotiations and perhaps add to the complexity of an already difficult process, he said.

The main task of the committee is to complete articles concerning the fund's financial structure and its mode of opera-tions so that the full text of the accord can be adopted at a fourday conference at the end of

Although industrialized and developing states reached agreement on the basic elements of the fund a year ago, the com-

would be to provide resources totalling $400m to buy buffer stocks of commodities, including cocos, built up when prices fell and released when they rose to keep the ranges within agreed limits.

The fund would also have a second facility with target resources of £350m to finance research and development and schemes to improve produc-tivity, marketing and diversifi-

However, industrialized and developing countries are still far apart on such key issues as the role of guarantee capital to be provided by international commodity bodies associated with the fund, and questions relating to borrowing by the Copper talks. It now looks as though the negotiations between the major United States copper producing companies and labour for a new contract will develop into an absolute cliff-hanger, with talks going on right up to the June 30 deadline when the current contract expires.

Reuter quotes one Washing-ton source as saying that it would be unrealistic to expect

On May 1 discussions will begin between the industry and the union that both sides putting forward demands and ineetings will be held by the end of May after the local units have reviewed the proposals. Serious negotiations will then follow.

The union will be demanding improved wages and fringe benefits and will bring up safety issues. There will be reluctance to accept a contract much below President Carter's woluntary wage and price guide-lines which allow for wage and price increases of 7.5 to 9.5 per cent a year.

The key factor at the time of the negotiations will be the condition of the copper market: if demand is weak and supplies are plentiful, the companies will be more likely to offer a will be more likely to offer a low settlement and this could lead to a work smppage. But if prices bold firm and the econ-omy is strong, the companies will seek to avoid a lengthy strike which would be costly.

The steel, aluminium and can industries all have contracts with the steelworkers which expire before the copper contract, but it is thought unlikely that the union would use any steel contract as a pattern for a copper contract.

It is expected that at the forthcoming talks the union and the companies will seek a threeyear contract, the same length as in the past

Mr Thomas D. Barrow, chairman of the Kennecott Copper Corporation, has told security analysts in the United States that his company is seeing no signs of a recession in its mar-

mentioned He strength in sales of coated abrasives and in demand for copper strip in the car industry where the company is principally a supplier to the General Motors

Mr Barrow said that Kenne-cott had had a great first quarter but added that its out-look for the balance of 1980 was uncertain because of metal price fluctuations and the pending labour negotiations.

He said that he expected copper prices to "go up and down like a yo-yo for a while". He noted that copper fabricators inventories currently amounted to only about two week's sure compared to a normal four to

He also said that Kan and expects to take up an or and buy a 49 per cent intress a a silver mine and mili in Mexico, subject to approval by the Mexican government.

THE MACALLAN STILLS ARE

CURIOUSLY SMALL. On Speyside, the older savants will tell you that a wee still makes a finer whisky. In support of this contention, the stills employed by Macallan are the smallest now in use in the area, adhering strictly to the original size and shape - just as Macallan follow the traditional method of heating the stills by DIRECT FURNACE." Indeed in every area, where the option has been to adopt an easier course. Macallan have taken the path of virtue - a route which only in the fulness of time, leads to delectable reward.

THE MACALLAN. THE MALT.
